"Birth Of A Nation" To Be Shown Sat.

By Orion Holen

The fourth and final program of the Early American Film Series will be presented in Dunham Auditorium this Saturday night.

To be shown at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. "The Birth of a Nation" is unquestionably the most important film ever made. The great director D. W. Griffith drew upon all the technical devices he and others had developed in the film industry and forced this new medium of pictorial expression to employ fully its unique potential for the first time.

The great success and enduring prominence enjoyed by the Griffith production arose not simply because of its quote subject matter, length or complexity but because it once and for all established, for the public, the basic nature and capacities of the motion picture.

Although dispunctive and unlife-like "The Birth of a Nation" is nevertheless an emotionally effective succession of contrasting scene perspectives and rapidly alternating cross-cut scenes demonstrating the film medium to be more akin to musical composition than literary or dramatic style. It was this production that more than any other, convinced the viewing public that the motion picture was indeed an entirely new form of expression with unguessed power to stir the imagination.

Produced in 1915, the film, which is 175 minutes in length, glorifies the ideologies and exploits of the Klu - Klux - Klan in the reconstruction south. The leading roles are played by the Gish sisters.

Lynn Horry Is Student Of Week

Ridgeland, S. C., is the home of Lynn Horry, the student of the week.

Since coming to Brevard College Lynn has been on the Dean's List or Honor Roll each semester maintaining an average better than 2.0. "Very efficient" are the words Lynn's roommate, Nancy Brockwell, uses to describe her.

Lynn loves horses and could think of no better way to spend a day than horseback riding. Among her other likes are tall boys, the buttercups that bloom under the cross, and Brevard College. Differential equations are Lynn's main dislike.

Many people on campus do not realize what an active person Lynn is. Among her varied offices and honors she lists President of the Christian Council, "Big Sister," Marshall, and Hall Proctor. Lynn also serves actively as a member of S.G.A., Phi Theta Kappa, and Sec. - Treas. of Alpha Beta Gamma.

For the past two summer Lynn has been an aid in the Head Start program.

Lynn can boast of privileges, many another student cannot. She comes from a family of eight children. Too, her mother is a poet and is a recognized author of the book, A CONFIDENCE ON PARTING.

Next year Lynn plans to attend Newberry College and major in math with a future perhaps in working with computers.
