

NEWS BRIEFS

Honors Day set for Wednesday, Added to Life and Culture

The best and brightest of Brevard College's students will receive awards and citations tomorrow at the annual Honors Day festivities.

The 10:15 a.m. ceremony in the main gym is a Life and Culture event. Dean Harry Langley encourages everyone to attend. Most of the awards and honors to be presented are surprise announcements.

Awards will be presented by President Greer, Dean Langley and the division chairpersons and various organizations sponsoring awards to BC students.

The most prestigious honors include the President's Awards for Service, Citizenship, Academics and Achievement.

Also, the new SGA officers for 1989-90 will be installed. A campus-wide picnic will follow outside the gym.

BC Sports Banquet Tonight

Hundreds of top Tornado athletes will be recognized for achievement at the Tuesday, April 25, Athletic Banquet at 7 p.m. in the Myers Dining Hall.

Any student, other than those on an athletic team, can attend the banquet free (if he/she doesn't eat the regular evening meal) by picking up a ticket from Linda Wilson in the gym. Otherwise the tickets are $5 from the Athletic Office.

Prez on the Move

BC in the national media? It could happen.

Brevard College President has had interviews with several national media giants in the last week telling higher education writers and educators about Project Inside-Out, the school's new service component.

During April, Dr. Greer has told the BC story to USA Today, US News and World Report, Knight-Ridder Syndicate, and the Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

Chiaroscuro Off the Press

As of Clarion presstime, the 1989 Chiaroscuro is scheduled to be back from the printer by today, April 25.

The Brevard College literary and arts magazine contains poems, line drawings, photographs and a short story by BC students, alumni and faculty.

Editor Selena Lauterer was assisted by Art Editor Matthew French. Next year's Chiaroscuro editor will be Sean Frazier.

Rob Murray wins Library Week

Rob Murray won Jones Library's National Library Week drawing. The Marietta, Ga., freshman gets a $25 gift certificate to Highland Books.

Snack Bar Closing

Due to the construction beginning on the new SU, the Snack Bar has been forced to discontinue service in mid-April, according to the Office of Student Affairs. Until it re-opens in the new Coltrane SU next year, an expanded selection of sandwiches, snack foods and beverages will be available at the College Bookstore.

Poet Toad Bids Adieu....

I was green...

as green as a soft-bellied toad in spring.
And I knew Everything.
As much as an 18 year old thinks they know.
And all these other people around me knew nothing.
Well, my attitude didn't go too far before it got squashed —
like the way freckle faced bullies smash innocent ant hills in the school yard — Yes sir, I think us fresh/men were Tender Toes to the gravel road of True Academe.

It was a year of Initiation.
A Flat, clean blackboard just aching for an impression from the smooth, powder chalk that lay quiet, waiting for me to snatch it up and doggone realize what being here could mean — and to some — it didn't mean a whole lot.
We came in, wagging our tails, thinking so full of ourselves, our heads might explode.
Sooner or later though,
for me sooner,
we were humbled.
Taught in class that we didn't really know much at all and to buckle our seat belts and away we go.

But see here now, I'm not some holy roller Who's omniscient and doesn't need nobody and enjoys eating worms.
No.
I am still wading and at times floundering for my senses —
Green as Ever.
Yet it's the understanding of not understanding,
the consistency of change and the acceptance of departure.
