He graduated from Clemson University and began work at Ecusta in 1961 in the field of international sales. He also worked at P.H. company until his return to Pisgah Forest and the Ecusta Division in March of 1993 as Vice-President and General Manager. In addition to his work at Ecusta and his membership on the Board of Trustees at Brevard College, Lawrence is a member of the National Advisory Board of the Brevard Music Center. He and his wife, Martha, live in Brevard; they have one son, Robb, who is currently attending Wake Forest University.

of the Atlanta Symphony and is president of Gardens for Peace. Balentine is also involved in efforts to revitalize Atlanta's inner city areas.

In addition to endorsing these two new trustees, the Brevard College Board of Trustees also endorsed the re-election of seven trustees, currently serving on the board, whose terms expire in 1994: Rev. Jones of Charlotte, N.C.; Dyeann B. Jordan of Winston-Salem, N.C. and Barbara Nesbitt of Lake Wylie, S.C.

Infirmary limits availability of condoms

by John Roberts
Clarion Asst. Editor

The Brevard College Infirmary has stopped giving out free condoms to students. There are several reasons why they chose to stop giving them away.

The first reason is because students were abusing the privilege. They were asking for too many at a time, and there were some people who were misusing them (water balloons, etc.). Also, students were leaving used condoms on the campus instead of throwing them away.

The second reason the infirmary has stopped giving away condoms is because it is not in their policy to have to give away condoms. They just started giving them out last year on a trial basis. They have a responsibility to the students, but they also have a responsibility to the trustees, and some of them thought the infirmary giving away condoms was promoting sex.

The third reason the infirmary has stopped giving away condoms is because in most cases they are not medically necessary. Any student who needs condoms for medical reasons will still be able to get them from the infirmary.

If you have any comments or suggestions, contact Mrs. Lee Henry, Director of Student Health Services.

Trustee supports Performing Arts

Brevard College trustee Maxine Forrest of Shelby and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Scott Francis of Charlotte, have made a gift of $600,000 to Brevard College in support of the Paul B. Porter Performing Arts Center. The gift will provide for a pavilion at the entrance of the center which will include an exhibition area and a large, public area for gatherings and smaller performances. The pavilion's most distinguishing feature, a colonnaded rotunda, will house a spiral staircase for access to the balcony of the main auditorium, and the entire pavilion will face the Brevard College campus with a dramatic view of King's Creek.

Forrest, who currently serves as vice-chairperson for the Brevard College Board of Trustees, has been a member of the board since 1988. In addition to her duties as vice-chairperson, Forrest also serves on the Executive Committee and the Finances and Endowments Committee.

College receives endowments for two new scholarships

Special to the Clarion
from the BC News Bureau

Brevard College has recently received money to set up scholarships for the Music Department and the Math and Science Department.

Brevard College has received an anonymous endowment of $100,125, the interest of which will be used to support the teaching of math and science at Brevard College. The Brevard College Division of Math and Sciences currently offers courses in biology, chemistry, geology, mathematics and physics, and is in its second year of offering an Associate in Science degree.

"Many reports describe the need for our country's educational community to address the teaching of mathematics and science in our schools and colleges. This donor has made a decision to become a partner in this most important quest: the education of our young men and women," said Brevard College President J. Thomas Bertrand.

Louise Y. Ferguson of Pineville, N.C., has established an endowed scholarship at Brevard College to support students who come to the College to study music.

"Brevard College is proud to have the support of Mrs. Ferguson for this scholarship, which will allow students who wish to study music to take advantage of our fine music program here at Brevard College," said J. Thomas Bertrand, President of Brevard College. "Through her generosity, students will be able to pursue their dreams of a career in music, starting with Brevard College."

Coed

However, Sanchez believes that they will inly be treated like adults when they have shown the responsibility that is required, otherwise "if you act like children, we will treat you like children."

Some of the things residents would like to see changed are the curfew on the lobby for non-residents, lack of pool privileges and visitation hours. Many students feel that we should be allowed to have overnight guests of the opposite sex. As Jennie Williams, "They are going to sneak them in anyway, they might as well be allowed to do it."

All these things will be taken into consideration next year when they decide whether or not to continue this program.
