B.C. Basketball Team Still in the Running

Heidi Rodenbaugh
Asst. Editor

The Brevard College basketball team has been practicing hard to improve their record of 7 wins and 13 losses. Even though they lost a few players from last semester they are still holding on strong. They are entering the Conference in last place, but if they stick to working hard and staying focused, they could still have a shot to win.

On February 14, Brevard's biggest game will be against Spartanburg Methodist, which is ranked second in the nation. The team needs your support next Wednesday night, so come to the game and cheer them on.

The members of the basketball team include: Todd Aiston, point guard; Mike Felder, Forward; Scotty Setser, point guard; Teon Cooke, Guard; Daman Daughtry, Guard; Joe Cooper, center; Stacy Lucy, guard; Derrick Jackson, center.

Intramurals Benefit Non-intercollegiate Athletes

Tim Strong
Sports Writer

The Intramurals at Brevard College really benefit the students who are not able to compete in intercollegiate athletics. Mike Louter, Residence director at Green Dormitory, is in charge of all the Intramurals at Brevard.

Some of the fall sports included football, indoor soccer, and volleyball. The competition levels were extremely high throughout each sport.

Darris "Spark Plug" Hodges, a student at Brevard, was a football participant. "The competition was all right, our team was underrated the whole tournament." The team went on to win the football championship game.

The spring Intramurals are just getting underway with sports such as skiing and basketball. So far the Intramurals are running very smoothly and the students are really enjoying the sports this year.

For more information on the dates and times of these sporting events, please contact Mike Louter. Good luck to all teams and participants in the Intramurals this spring. Students, be sure to come out and catch these exciting events.

Olympic Hopefuls Train at B.C.

Dreams are seldom a concern in the field of Running. To make ground as a professional runner, one has to endure endless hours of excruciating pain and be able to surpass life's everyday endeavors.

Yes, in the little town of Brevard we have people training for the Olympics. Brevard's Track has been the focal point for two hardworking individuals that have a dream of being in the Olympic Games.

Randy Ashley attended Brevard College back in 1984-1985. Randy was a part of the Cross Country team and Track team. He trained and traveled around the country trying to find the perfect place to train; however, he has ended up where he began. When I asked Randy if the pressure was getting to him, he stated, "not at all."

Chad Newton, a graduate from the University of Georgia, has landed in Brevard to do the same as Randy, train for the Olympic Trials. Chad, a native from Atlanta, Georgia, has put his mind and money into the wonderful mountains of Brevard. Chad thinks his hard work and endless hours will soon pay off.

Randy Ashley and Chad Newton are in the spotlight next Saturday only to represent what runners call a quest for glory. Being able to train here in Brevard has given Randy and Chad a perfect opportunity to make their dreams come true. Many runners never get to compete in the Olympic Trials, much less get to try for a shot at the Olympics. Hard work and dedication is what has given them their shot for glory.
