On Sept. 21, Campus Life held two College Hearing Board meetings regarding two students who allegedly made copies of Brevard College's grand master key.

According to head of Campus Life, Dean Sue Yowell, the students were working for Campus life during August before school started; during this time Campus Life became aware that each of the students had a copy of the school's master key, which opens nearly every door on campus. According to Associate Dean of Student Affairs, Rob Seay, the students were issued the original master key for approximately a day, during which time their job was to prep dorm rooms for the upcoming semester.

Campus Life has been investigating the situation, and Dean

Yowell says that they no longer find reason to suspect that there are any other copies of the grand master key.

The College Hearing Boards were held separately for each of the students because one of them was faced with an additional charge involving a stolen camera. This incident was, according to Dean Yowell, unrelated to the copying of the school's master key. This student has been issued disciplinary sanctions, which he has until Saturday, Sept. 30th to appeal.

The other student facing only the charge involving the master key does not anticipate an appeal, and agreed to release his disciplinary sanctions for public record. These sanctions include student disciplinary probation, 7 hours of community serves, and apology letters to both Rob Seay and Campus Security.
