

Dear Tex, How do you talk to woman and successfully pick them up?

My dear friend,

I just don't get with anybody because that is not the way of Gentlemen.

Gentlemen, there are not many of us left. If you follow my simple steps you might be able to pick up a woman.

1. You need to be friends with everybody first.
2. Stop looking for it, it won't happen if you look for it to happen!
3. Don't look at bars because the women that you find in bar's are not the ones that you want to take home to mom. They are nice to look at but they might have something that the doctor can't fix.
4. You can go to church and meet women that way too.
5. The best way is to meet them at school or work or through friends. It is like fishing on a boat, you have multiple fishing lines in the water.
6. When you start talking to somebody you have to be yourself and always tell the truth no matter what, the truth will save you in the end.
7. Always be nice.
8. Open doors, be polite, and dress nice. Women can't stand when guys can't dress right, and make sure that you smell good too. Don't spray to much cologne on you, all you need is two sprays on your shirt.
9. If you do meet someone that you like don't call them all the time because that is a big turn off! Call them once in a wile.
10. Fashions go out of stile, relationships come and go, but manners never go out of style!

I am very old fashioned in my ways, sometimes my sisters say that I was born in the wrong time period. I dress very well. I respect everybody no matter what their differences are.

I have had the luxury to be in love once. Sex is not important, because it ruins relationships if you are not serious about the person that you love. You should not have sex unless you truly love that person and plan to get married. That's what I believe. Personal relationships are better and sex is not the only thing. TV has distorted the truth about sex and made it some big thing that is cool and that everybody does all the time and that is not true at all.

I hope that this help you a little.

Album review:

Foo Fighters

by: Aaron Palmer
Editor in Chief

Foo Fighters return to the music scene late this year with their most complex album to date, "Echoes, Silence, Patience and Grace". Though it may not be their best, it's still better than most popular rock out now. Frontman Dave Grohl has lead the band from his basement where he made their first album himself, to the epic act that they've become.

Grohl seems to have the Midas touch for rock. After playing with Nirvana, Queens of the Stone Age, Tenacious D and numerous metal icons, he has brought forth his various influences onto this record. Confidently screaming his way through thirteen new tracks and backed by the perfectly tight drums of Taylor Hawkins, Grohl leaves us with a solid album.

Differing from previous works, "Echoes" hits various highs and lows, incorporating piano work and bluegrass style finger picking. The harder songs rip with ferocity while the mellow songs stay melodic and heartfelt.

The explosive opening track, and first single from the album lets us know right off how hard the band still is before they plunge into more melodies and acoustics than usual. In the end, it all seems to wrap up well, with amazingly clean production, surprising guitar work and the grungy, power pop sound that we've come to expect from the band.

This past Tuesday night, North Village 1 hosted their third contra dance. It was also the first series hosted on Brevard College campus. Josh Carter (NV1) was the Teller/Host along with the band: Hunter Holmes (NV1), Steven Acker (NV1), Jene Harb, and Charles Jordan. Roughly around 30 people showed up for the dance and anyone could join for the following dances.

Haven't been contra dancing? Not to worry, before each dance begins there will be a run through of the steps until you have it down. Dances are expected to take place in front of North Village 1 on Tuesday nights, beginning at 7:30. Contact Josh Carter, or any other people from North Village 1, for more information.
