Spring Singles that are Bloomin'

by David Ulloa Staff Writer

"Tenderoni"- Al-P Remix

Being the other half of the sonic voyage of MSTRKRFT says enough about Al-P, but with this single released and only crafted by the lone mixer says a lot more. The crunches, beats, and overall splicing of lyrics makes this single even better than the Chromeo version. This is definitely a crowd pleaser, but also a headphones delight. "Shoulda Known"-Atmosphere

Previous to this single, Atmosphere's hip-hop techniques have been somewhat questionable. This song is genuinely taking a different route into achieving something less bumpy and more groovy. The flows are gentle and the throwback bass- hum is right on with precision. If you enjoy Aesop Rock's degenerate style of rapping to a slow beat then this will suit your fancy.

"Bounce" (feat N.O.R.E.) - MSTRKFT

The letting go of MSTRKRFT's original dance music ethic could possibly be evident with this song, but let's not make any assumptions until the new record comes out. Anyways, this single markets more towards the poppy/thrash sound. With the inclusion of N.O.R.E's rhymes and swagger, the duo are throwing an agreeable monkey wrench into their creative ways. Like the song states "All I do is party", take it from them and get down with it.

"Next of Kin"- Surkin

Surkin has a brilliant way with combining several styles of music into one definite head-bouncer of a song. This epic dance-off, starts out roller rink worthy with ascending synths that burst into a house pulse that thrives off the mega build up. This rollercoaster of a song goes through light phases of funk and into 80's dance glory. Daft Punk should really be worried about this sound getting heavy and dope amongst mutual fans; it could be the start of a new robot revolution. Surkin will release their full length album by the fall.

Are you going to be in Brevard for Memorial Day weekend, May 24 & 25?

If so, consider volunteering to work the Squirrel Box Derby for the White Squirrel Festival. The festival coordinators have asked for help from Brevard College students to run this event. There a several jobs such as time/score keeping and logistics, but your assignments would be varied or rotated so that you can experience all areas of the event. In return, you will receive a nice t-shirt, free pizza, and lots of laughs (not all vehicles go down the hill in a straight-line nor can they stop). You will also learn what all is involved in putting on an event of this size. If interested, contact Dr. Deborah Francis at francidh@brevard.edu, room 233 MG.
