

Since Michael Cohen has been in the paper for the past three issues the Clarion staff did not want him to miss out on this special edition so there is a "Where's Michael" hidden between these pages. Good luck!

New mascot revealed: Goodbye Tornado!

By Chad Kelly
Minion

This past week President Joyce has revealed that Fall 2013 will mark the beginning of a new college mascot, exchanging the Tornado for the White Squirrel.

One of the members on the Board of Trustees brought up the idea after comparing the destructive power of tornados to the damage done to Beam Hall and other residential facilities.

"Because of the extensive damage we have seen done to this campus by students," one member stated "we came to realize that our mascot was the main cause ...we felt as a whole that there needed to be a change."

"It was a very difficult decision to make," said Joyce "but something had to be done to help the school prosper."

Joyce and the Board both agreed on the squirrel because of its "...local origins and docile nature... we have even received special permission from the U.S. Department of Forestry to adopt a local squirrel to raise and train as our official mascot! Soon the whole campus will know of 'Willy the White Squirrel!'"

Some of the other options included the Bears, the Mountaineers, and the Human Beings.

"None of those really fit Brevard; and I think that last one was from a T.V. show... Overall, what sounds better than 'Brevard College: Home of the White Squirrels'?"

TPHAT hosts kissing booth

By Emily Deck-A-Strick
Arts & Crafts

This April 1, TPHAT will station a kissing booth in the main courtyard between MG and MS from 4 a.m. to 10 p.m.

In an effort to raise awareness about Mononucleosis or "gross lip death," TPHAT will be charging 1$ for any conscientious student who wants to kiss a member of the cycling team. The BC Scuba-Diving club will also provide "share-me shakes" as refreshments.

The money will go towards integrated toilet-water fountains in the MG restrooms. As BC strives to become a more eco-friendly and well-hydrated campus, these toilet-water devices will reduce costs and make it easier for students to pee and have a sip of water in between classes.

BC—Get ready to lock your lips and share your sips to raise awareness about this seriously unattractive disease.

Screw Lacrosse, let's play Quidditch!

By Olivia Faucet
The Kitchen Sink

This past Sunday SAAC (Student Athletic Advisory Committee) met and discovered that the Athletic Department had decided to use the money originally dedicated to the new lacrosse program to fund a quidditch team instead.

Over 46 colleges have quidditch teams including UNC Greensboro, NC State, College of Charleston, Tennessee Tech, and Duke. Although these teams are not in our Division II conference, the IQA (International Quidditch Association) really doesn't give a damn.

The quidditch team which has been named the "Brevard College Boggarts," will be coached by both Ralpheine Rathbone and J. Thomas Snodgrass.

Brevard College has decided to hold tryouts on April 13 in honor of Quidditch World Cup VI being held in Kissimmee, FL.

