

College Observes

(Continued From Page Three)

Regan as the first president.

These three institutions, with splendid traditions gathered over the years, bequeathed to Brevard college a priceless heritage. It was, therefore, expected that the new institution would immediately take its place in the fore ranks of the junior colleges of North Carolina. This expectation was fulfilled. The quality of its product was soon tested in four year colleges and universities throughout the nation. Graduates and former students from Brevard college have successfully transferred to more than seventy senior colleges, universities, and professional schools in twenty-one states and the District of Columbia.

Today the college enjoys full state and regional accreditation. Soon after it was admitted to the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in 1949, it was accredited by that pioneering accrediting agency, the University Senate of the Methodist Church, which was the official accrediting agency of the Methodist Church until it discontinued this function.

Brevard college has never aspired to be big. It has continually aspired to be good in all that this word connotes. Motivated by this desire, a building program was launched in 1947. The fruits of this endeavor can be seen in an excellent library, a modern infirmary, the new dormitory for women, and in the renovation now under way in Dunham and Taylor Hall. Other new buildings and improvements are to fol-

Refresher Courses In English And Mathematics

In order to provide for the needs of rising high school seniors, and high school graduates whose background in English and mathematics is inadequate, the summer school curriculum offers remedial courses in these subjects. High school students who are interested in taking any of these courses for credit should confer with their principals. Upon request, the Dean of the College will be glad to go into details regarding course content.

Students who have not taken plane geometry will be able to complete this subject during the summer term.

From Indian Days

(Continued From Page Two)

and cultural pulse of the entire community.

Today three-fourths of the county's 379 square miles is covered with forests, streams and waterfalls and is reminiscent of the days of the Cherokee Indians. Modern highways, however, running through prosperous farms or by busy industries are as giant fingers pointing with pride to evidences of advancement on every hand.

low. In the meantime, valuable scholarships and an endowment fund of more than a half million dollars have given the institution a financial stability which stands as a pledge for continued service as Brevard college closes its first century's history and faces the challenge of the second hundred years.

Renovation Of Taylor Hall To Be Completed In Spring

When the co-eds move from Taylor Hall to the new dormitory for women following the Easter holidays, the renovation of the building, which had to be discontinued with the beginning of the Fall Semester, will be resumed.

The major work will be confined to a complete rewiring of the building, its redecoration inside and out, and the laying of tiling for the floors. During the late summer all-tile baths with marble standards were installed, and the entrance to the building was reworked.

Taylor Hall was constructed in 1924 as a girls' dormitory but was later used for men. During World War II it was turned over to the co-eds because of the scarcity of men students, and because of the need for increased dormitory facilities for young women. Now, after a ten-year interval, it will again become a residence for men when the summer term opens on June 8, 1953, but modernized and improved in many respects.

Women's Dormitory

(Continued From Page Two)

mountains.

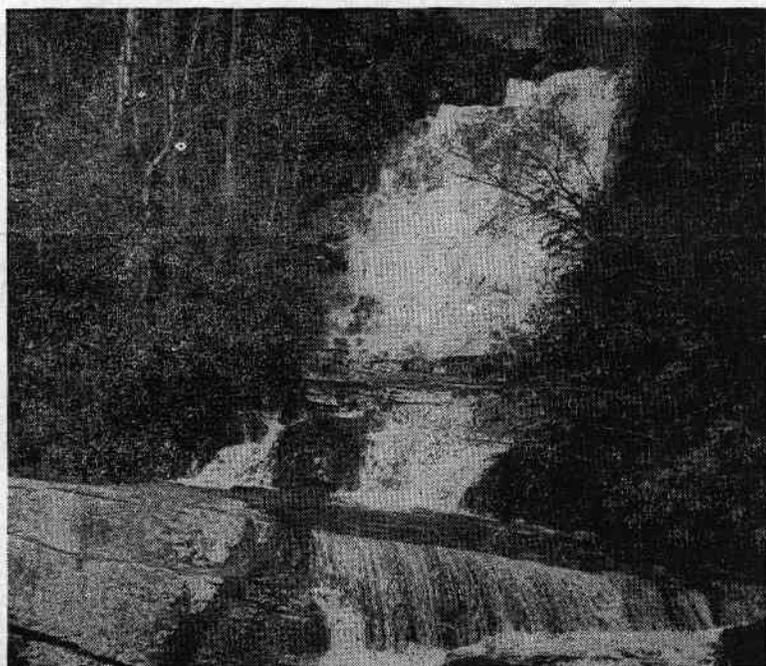

The college is unusually fortunate in having as a member of the Board of Trustees a furniture manufacturer. He has taken a special interest in the furniture for the dormitory. The furnishings will be new throughout. From the Hollywood type beds and mahogany chests in the students' rooms, to the drapes and accessories for the reception parlor, everything will be tastefully done according to the advice of an interior decorator whose services have been contributed because of the interest of this trustee.

Scenic Wonderland

(Continued From Page One)

the climax of the summer's musical attractions.

During the summer session trips are arranged so that students can attend two of the outstanding dramatic productions of this area. Unto These Hills, depicting the vicissitudes of the Cherokee Indians from the days of De Soto to Andrew Jackson, is an especial attraction, with the commodious amphitheater located in the heart of the Cherokee country. The other production, Thunderland, is a story of the life of Daniel Boone.

BEAUTIFUL GLEN CANNON FALLS NEAR BREVARD

Volume XX No. 2
BREVARD COLLEGE BULLETIN
 Published quarterly by Brevard College in cooperation with the Clarion staff. Subscription price $1.00 a year.

Sec. 34.65 P. L. & R.
 U. S. POSTAGE PAID
 Brevard, N. Car.
 Permit No. 35

Miss Elizabeth Ann Clapp
 High Point College
 High Point, N. C.