STUDENT RESEARCHES GAY HEALTH

HARTFORD, Conn.--A questionnaire has been developed and is now being circulated to better understand the quality of health care given to gay people. The project is being conducted by L. Dardick, a medical student at the University of Connecticut in Farmington.

In reference to persons responding to the questionnaire, Dardick said, "I, nor anyone else involved with this project will have access to your name, address, or any other identifying information. No attempt will be made to identify you. There will be no follow-up of respondents or non-respondents. Data, if published in the final report, will be in terms of groups, not individuals."

Persons interested in filling out the questionnaire should write:

IRANIAN PURGE CONTINUES

HAMEDAN, Iran--A secret revolutionary court in Hamedan has tried and executed Hossein Amiri, described as the leader of a group of homosexuals. The group, the "Yellow Scorpions," were accused of raping several boys.

As revolutionary trials are being held in secrecy in Iran, without the right to counsel or appeal for the accused, the facts of any particular case cannot be fully determined.

Amiri's death brings to 300 the number of people known to have been executed by firing squads since Ayatollah Khomeini's rise to power in February.

Two dozen of the executions have been termed punishment for sexual offenses, although Khomeini said in May that only persons convicted of murder or torture would be executed.

RADIO REINSTATES BAPTIST

Southern Baptist evangelist James Robison, whose Sunday morning program was cancelled by Dallas station WFAA-TV after he criticized homosexuals has been reinstated by the station.

WFAA officials cancelled the program early this year, calling Robison a "continuing problem." In Robison's February 25 program he quoted a National Enquirer article that quoted a law enforcement official as saying homosexuals recruit and murder little boys.

According to the Durham Morning Herald, WFAA officials say they were forced to give the Dallas Gay Political Caucus free time to defend gay lifestyles following the broadcast.

Station president Dave Lane, also a Southern Baptist, says Robison has offered assurances he can stay within the WFAA policy bounds.
