

ADVICE & HUMOR

Ask A Breeder: Aisling Doyle

Dear Breeder,

I'm sick of all these straight people trying to set me up with their queer friends! And I'm tired of short-haired girls like you throwing me mixed signals and getting me all confused. Why do you breeders torment us so? Can't you just leave well enough alone?

—Pissed in Parker

Dear Pissed,

Hmmm...so you're sick of straight kids trying to get all up in yo' game? Why is it so bad that us breeders just want to help? Chances are, your straight friends look to you and their other straight friends as their token "gay pal." We all know about this—the "I've got gay friends too!" phenomenon. Homosexuality, though an ancient and long enjoyed tradition of many, is seen as new and exciting in modern day America. It's a movement that we cannot participate in because of our "straightness." My advice to you is to either be "straight" up with your friend and tell him/her to stop interfering or just roll with it and maybe you'll find your soul mate. As for short-haired breeders sending out mixed signals, that's just life. You win some, you lose some.

Dear Breeder,

I have always taken great pride in my buff physique and cut body, but recently I've noticed that I also like to touch other men's cut bodies. But I really like girls. I swear! Do you think my girlfriend has figured out my dirty secret? Where can I turn to for some sweet love?

—Macho in Mangum

Dear Macho Macho Man,

I'm not quite sure how my expert breederness can help you, but I'll give it my best shot. I'm glad you have pinpointed this emerging condition. Who says big guys can't be flamers??? There are no rule books, so I say go with it! And if you knew enough to check out Lamda then you're on the right track to finding plenty of resources and ideas to get that well deserved "sweet love." As for your girlfriend, is she really all she's cracked up to be? When you go to the SRC do you head for the aerobics sessions or do you rush gleefully to the free-weights? Sit down with yourself and do some hardcore thinking...the answer will come eventually.

Dear Breeder,

I think my boyfriend (also my roommate) is cheating on me, but I can't be sure. He comes home smelling like other men, and he avoids my gaze when I try to probe his soul. Please help me find out if he's just being mysterious or if he's being unfaithful. Maybe your straight brain is better at figuring these things out.

—Suspicious in Stacy.

My dear suspicious friend,

I'm curious to know what this roommate relationship consists of. Are you sure he thinks he's your boyfriend? Do your dates consist of hanging out in the room, ordering pizza together, talking a little before you both settle down in your respective beds? If so, perhaps your roommate is a breeder. Maybe you have fooled yourself into thinking compatibility as roommates is equal to the true love of lifemates. The strong scent of other men and the cold shoulder are clues to me that this may not be the man for you. And while you are probing his soul, be sure you aren't trying to probe anything else...this could prove unsuccessful in your search for love in your "boyfriend."
