Freshman Class Leaders

On Tuesday, November 5, 1968, the freshman class nominated class officers during chapel. Those nominated were: Treasurer, Jean McLamb, Fenton Winstead, and Mary Clark Caldwell; Secretary, Sandy Finch and Lynn Mackintyre; Vice President, Wayne Anderson, Lea Barnes, Toni Gupton, Rusty Holderness, Cathy Strickland, and Debra Webb; President, Randy Crawford, Worth Kinlaw, Steve Loveland, Ken Morrison and Tommy Wright.

It was then decided that all the candidates running for the various offices should give a one or two minute speech to enable the members of the freshman class to become acquainted with all of those running for office.

On Tuesday, November 12, each of the nominees gave a speech during the latter part of the freshman chapel.

The election of the office seekers was held on Thursday, November 14, in the cafeteria during lunch. Only freshmen were allowed to vote. The freshman class elected Tommy Wright as their president, Wayne Anderson, vice president, Sandy Finch, secretary, and Mary Clark Caldwell, treasurer.

Field Trip

On Friday the 8th day of November, a group of Louisburg College biology students boarded the college's bus and headed for Beaufort, North Carolina. The students represented the classes of Mr. Barris, Dr. Nease, Mrs. Palmer, and Mr. Washburn. The bus left our campus shortly after 1:00 p.m. and arrived at the Duke Marine Laboratory well after dark. Friday night was spent on the beach of Bogue Sound seining the shallow water for organisms. The pilings of a nearby pier were scraped; they yielded a few starfish, sea urchins, and sea squirts. Early Saturday morning the party travelled to Morehead City by bus to board a boat and dredge the sound. The students split into two groups; one group traveled down Bogue Sound and the other group traveled up the Sound. The dredging yielded

Columns Attends Convention

On October 31 through November 2 of this year the 44th annual conference of the National Collegiate Press was held in New York City. Jimmy White and Russ Tolar represented Columns at this convention. Delegates to the conventions came from forty-six different states and two foreign countries. There were about 1700 delegates to the convention. The purpose of the meeting was to promote better journalism in both college newspapers and yearbooks. The conference was opened Thursday night with welcoming addresses from the program officials and the Deputy-Mayor of New York City. A talk was also given by John Allen, Senior Editor of the Reader's Digest. The daily schedule consisted of meetings on various aspects of college journalism.

little volume, but there was a large variety of organisms represented. Saturday afternoon most of the students rowed to a nearby mud-flat where wild ponies were sighted along with other animals. One rowboat was left high and dry because its captain forgot the tide was on its way out. The students worked hard classifying the animals Saturday night. An adjoining lab was occupied by students from Mary-Baldwin College. Specimens were shared by both colleges. Sunday morning the bus was loaded for the trip back to Louisburg. On the way back to campus an interesting side trip was taken to Fort Macon, a Civil War fort. The faculty members showed their cooking skills by preparing breakfast on portable gas stoves in the cool morning air. Aside from the fact that there was no heat in the dorms and very cold and rainy weather, the trip was a complete success.

In order to have time for all of the meetings were held, seven to eight meetings were held simultaneously. The persons who headed these meetings were all authorities in their particular fields. The students attending gathered much by discussions with fellow writers. Some were surprised to find that other publications shared many of the same problems as their own. Saturday's meetings were held until lunch. The luncheon was given by the Ford Foundation and followed up by an address by Lee A. Iacocca, Executive Vice President of Ford Motor Company.

In Thy wind-in Thy light-

How insignificant is everything else, how small are we --and how happy in that which alone is great.
