LADY CANES WIN NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP!

BY KELLY BLACKMAN

The slogan for the month of March throughout much of the United States is "March Madness." National championship time for college basketball has rolled around again.

Though not as famous as those other North Carolina collegiate champs, the Duke Blue Devils, Louisburg's Lady Hurricanes brought Louisburg College a share of the championship spotlight by winning the women's junior college national championship for the first time since 1981.

The Lady Hurricanes rolled into the tournament as the number one team in the country. Expectations were high for the Lady Canes.

They did not disappoint, winning all of their games in a most convincing manner. Most people believe that the National Championship is won in the final game. However, most tournament observers feel that Louisburg's semifinal game against national powerhouse Logan was the deciding game of the tournament. The Logan game was close, but the Lou-U team pulled it out. Their momentum rolled them through the championship game and the Canes had a national championship.

Students and supporters of the team held a huge celebration on campus the Sunday after the team's victory.

In the words of their T-shirt slogan, the Lady Canes are undisputably "Too Legit To Quit." Congratulations to Coach

Mike Holloman and the entire Lady Hurricane basketball team on a winning season and a great effort.
