THE STUDENT VOICE OF LOUISBURG COLLEGE

WE'RE BACK!

Student Publications gets off the ground

After a one year break, student publications is set to make its triumphant return.

You are holding in your hands the return of Columns, the student newspaper. In late summer The Oak, Louisburg College's yearbook will make its return appearance.

If you have contributions to make to either, stop by the Publications office in Davis Hall. Meeting times are planned for both The Oak and Columns, so be there!

What's next?

Second-year student Ashley Carter meets with a representative during College Day '95. The event was held on February 2nd.

Bailey to speak at Cambridge

Dr. Candace Lea Bailey, assistant professor of music at Louisburg College, has been selected to present an academic paper to the Royal Music Association Conference on Influence at Cambridge University in Cambridge, England. Bailey will present "A New Approach to French Influence on English Keyboard Music of the Seventeenth Century." The conference will be held in March.

Bailey, a native of Wilson, has been employed at Louisburg College since 1993. She holds her bachelors degree in music from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Both her master's degree and her doctorate degree are in musicology from Duke University.

In addition to her work at Louisburg College, Bailey is also active in the community. She serves as director of the Northeast Piedmont Chorale.
