

African topics featured in Ink

(Black History Month begins; see pages 4 and 5)

BLACK INK

The essence of freedom is understanding

Volume 13, No. 10

BLACK STUDENT MOVEMENT OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

February 10, 1981

BSM endorses candidates Norberg, Hummel

TERESA BLOSSOM
Staff Writer

The Black Student Movement endorsed Scott Norberg for student body president and Jim Hummel for Daily Tar Heel editor at its annual forum held recently.

The BSM also endorsed Brenny Thompson and Debbie Mixon for president and vice-president of the senior class.

Norberg, a sophomore, said that racism was one of the biggest problems at UNC.

"Student Government should work for a more aggressive recruitment program of minorities," he said. Norberg added that an increase in the number of women and black faculty was also needed. Other candidates proposed similar objectives. BSM Chairperson Mark Canady said that Norberg's previous work with the Minority Advisory Program and with the development of the position of Vice-Chancellor for University Affairs showed that Norberg was aware of problems Black students face.

But Canady stressed that "The decision reflects the voice of the general body of the BSM but not of all Black students because all Blacks are not members of the BSM."

In his prepared statement, Hummel said that one way to improve DTH coverage of the BSM and its cultural groups was to recruit more Black writers and editors.

"The DTH should be known to Black students while they are freshmen and sophomores," Hummel said. He added that it was understandable for Blacks to want to write for the Black Ink but that Blacks should be aware of the way the DTH works too.

Thompson and Mixon emphasized three major points in their campaign for senior class officers. They said they want to develop a constitution, expand the interview system to include more seniors and arrange a system for seniors to buy back robes from graduates, similar to the APO Book Co-op.

Elections for all campus positions will be held February 10. Students can vote at their respective dorms or other places on-campus.

'Discovery' committee members meet

Members of the Black Student Movement make final plans for the "Discovery" program, which was held recently on the UNC campus. Starting from the middle and going clockwise is Mark Canady, BSM chairperson, Sonja Payton, LaVie Ellison, "Discovery" chairperson, Lenora Mitchell, an unidentified person, Daphne Blout, Angela Ferebee, Roz Dawson and L'Tanya Mathis, BSM treasurer. (Photo by Beatrice Taylor.)

Tutorials resume

TERESA BLOSSOM
Staff Writer

Weekly tutorial sessions sponsored by the Minority Advisory Program on campus resumed the last week of January and will continue throughout the semester.

One afternoon session has been added because many freshmen indicated that the evening tutorials were not always convenient for them, according to graduate assistant Valerie Moore.

The schedule of days, times and places are:

Monday 7-8:30, 4th Floor Study Room/Ehringhaus; Tuesday 7-8:30, Seminar Room/Hinton James; Wednesday 4:30-6, 221 Greenlaw and 7-8:30, Recreation Room/Morrison; Thursday 7-8:30, 221 Greenlaw.

Office hours for the five graduate assistants are: Freddie Parker, Monday and Wednesday 11-12:30, Friday 10-11:30; Harold Woodard, Monday 1-3:30 and Wednesday 12:30-2; Rueben Young, Wednesday and Friday 1:30-4; Valerie Moore, Tuesday and Thursday 1-3; Shelia White, Tuesday and Thursday 9:30-11:30.

The graduate assistant office is on the first floor of Ehringhaus outside the information desk in an un-numbered room. The door is unmarked, but a sign will be painted on the door, the dorm's area director said.