

Tar Heels' road show journeys to College Park

In the midst of their season, North Carolina will journey to College Park to play Maryland, perennial ACC foe. In an earlier meeting the Tar Heels won decisively 75-56 over the Terrapins.

The important question then was whether or not freshman center Sam Perkins could handle Maryland pivot-man "Buck"

Williams. Perkins controlled Williams and aided Carolina to victory.

Maryland has most of their last season starters returning to action. ACC player of the Year, Albert King, highlights this unit.

King is a clutch performer because of his outstanding shooting ability while averaging 22 points a game. Swing forward Ernest Graham also adds to offensive firepower of Maryland. Graham is at his best when his defensive game is working.

Senior middle man, 6-8 Buck Williams can intimidate many ACC centers. The Rocky Mount native has outscored all his opponents he has played against and is deemed an all-around player.

In the backcourt for the Terrapins is the elusive Greg Manning. He is regarded as a pure shooter by many.

The Maryland team has a good bench and coach Lefty Drissell will not hesitate to employ it.

The Terrapins received a number ranking by Sports Illustrated in their preseason College poll. However has lived up to this recognition by losing two ACC contests; their record is 13-2.

In a past Associated Press poll, Carolina was twelfth while Maryland placed in as fourteenth. The Heels, February 15 will have a tough road assignment in College Park, Maryland.

said. But he has recently become interested in the problems Blacks on campus have been going through.

But, African students do not feel at liberty to vocally support Black Americans, Bonney said, because they think they could be deported.

Bonney, a short, stocky, dark man with a huge smile, is president of African Fellows Resident in Chapel Hill Area, which is an organization on campus. The group had 25 members last semester, but 10 South Africans left and were not replaced Bonney said.

It has been said that Africans don't identify with Black Americans, even though they have the same ancestral background. Bonney said that the rumor about the rift between they two peoples may be true.

Richards doesn't think that all Africans believe in the rumor. "Gambians are really glad to see Black Americans," he said. Richards and Bonney may have different views on various subjects, but they do agree on one thing.

Both men said they did not see people by their colors, but Americans did.

"I haven't seen myself as belonging to Black or white," Bonney said. "It's just not part of my mental attitude."
