handle by themselves. He added that college recruiters are seldom able to persuade high school seniors to choose North Carolina State A&T University over North Carolina State University.

Rushing said the inequalities between the traditionally black and white colleges would make the plan "successful in principle, but not in practice."

UNC system officials conveyed satisfaction with the decree. William C. Friday, President of the UNC system told the board at it's last summer meeting in July he had began to implement the decree. "The program set forth in that document is going to be the program we will follow for the next five years."

John R. ... chairman of the board said not everyone would be satisfied with the decree. "The academic community throughout the country is breathing a sigh of relief because UNC took its stand on who will control the internal affairs of the University."

sional newspapers, and the Daily Tar Heel. Black Ink will print stories on athletes which participate in areas other than sports.

The publication dropped the South Campus Predictors' columns because the editors agreed that this merely took up space and did not add to the effectiveness of the paper. In addition, the Ink is replacing Ancestral Voice with a Historical News Flash.

In the past, Black Ink has given much space to Black Greeks — this will change. The tabloid will run photographs of some stepshows and pledge lines in addition to publicizing their activities in public service.

Black Ink's editors, staff reporters and business personnel are dedicated to serving blacks in the Chapel Hill-Carrboro community. We will put forth every effort to meet these commitments this year.

Criticism of our efforts are welcomed, and some of them will be printed in the newspaper.

Input needed for Black Ink.

The Black Ink,
which meets every Monday
at 6:00 p.m. in Upendo Lounge needs
more input from interested students
especially Journalism majors. Anyone's help is greatly appreciated.
