

BULLDOGS TIE ASHEVILLE-BILTMORE 6-6

Cheering Section—

The Woman's View
By RACHEL SCROGGS

All Saturday afternoon one question passed up and down the halls of the girls dorm—"What are you wearing to the game?" Every red and black sweater and skirt available were dug out and donned.

Supper was one of the most hastily eaten meals of the season because everyone wanted to be ready to pile into the bus the second it drove up. Not everyone was lucky enough to get into the bus for there were more patriotic fans than had been anticipated.

The freshmen have learned now that the front seat, right side is reserved for Miss Morgan—especially one boy—for when she told him that if he sat there he had to share the seat with her, he moved to the back of the bus.

Once in the bus and on the way a small scale pep rally was held. The yells and school songs were sung until everyone should have known them perfectly. As the bus entered Marion, with all windows open, the arrival of the Gardner-Webb cheering section was lustily announced through the median of "Skinny Dink" and "Gardner-Webb's Pride of the All South."

The cars seemed to make better time getting to Marion than did the bus—about fifteen minutes sooner.

It was a pleasant surprise to see Marion's high school band waiting to play for the game—even when they cheered for our team.

The kick-off was a thing of perfection—naturally, G-W kicked off. From the very first it was an exciting game—even if Asheville-Biltmore did score the first touchdown. We felt definitely better when their kick for the extra point was no good. One of the big thrills of the game was when Nanny tackled a great big fellow that was just about to get away for another touchdown—one of the prettiest tackles you will ever see. Another high spot, and humorous, was once when A-B kicked from near their own goal post and it went off the side and went almost no distance—one of the few lucky breaks we got. Naturally the biggest thrill came when Smith punched across for our six points. The try for the extra point was no good, but that was all right that time, for A-B was off side. We again got a chance to try for the point and again A-B was off side. The next try for the point went straight through the posts making the score 7-3—we thought! What a disappointment to learn at the end of the game that there was another little matter of off side again—this time on our own side, and all that cheering we did thinking we had the extra point!

The return trip was much quieter, partly because we could not boast a clear out victory, but we were all really yelled-out, weren't we? Miss Morgan! On this trip the bus was quicker—the driver knew a short cut, then too, there was plenty of gas in the bus—even if there was no food.

We might not have had the top core but we most surely didn't have the low score, even so. No one was sorry he went, and we were ready to be in the cheering section ready to go all the way with our team in the next game!

First Contest A Thriller

Could we have seen any better? That was undoubtedly the query of a large crowd of Marion fans as they watched the Gardner-Webb Bulldogs and an equally potent Asheville-Biltmore eleven fight to a nip and tack 6-6 standstill Saturday night in a non-loop attraction, the opener for Norman Harris' outfit.

Pre-game suppositions indicated such a match, which featured some of the most vicious defensive play ever displayed by junior college teams. Line play was especially impressive throughout the first quarter, when yardage on the ground totaled a very small figure for both teams.

It was in the closing minutes of the first quarter that Asheville-Biltmore's T-formation machine, capably quarterbacked by Ken Morgan, began to roll. And it was Morgan, a 170-pounder who broke loose as the outstanding gallop of the night, a 63-yard scamper that broke the ice early in the second period. Bulldog Fullback Henry Smith, whose punting kept the Asheville crew battling in their own territory much of the game, booted to Max Spurlin's gang on their own 19 yard line.

Three brilliant running escapades by Hoyt Hayes, a diminutive but slippery halfback moved the ball 21 yards to the 40-yard marker. A two-yard gain and a penalty netted a loss of three yards to the 37. From that point, Morgan fed a hand-off, reversed field, and picked up superb downfield blocking on his paydirt again. The extra point was void.

SMITH SCORES
Then Gardner-Webb turned on the steam with a clicking ground attack which the Bulldogs met head-on. After stopping a G-W drive which covered 83 yards, Asheville took over on downs on their own 15-yard line, where the spirited Bulldog line held like a stone wall, forcing Fullback Emmett Dietz to kick. Dietz's punt, however, went out of bounds on his own 25.

Taking advantage of the break, Halfback James Garrison and Fullback Henry Smith picked up 17 yards on three plays down to the Asheville 8. But a penalty cost the locals five as Smith regained three of the lost yardage. It took Quarterback Joe Robertson two attempts before the three-man field general hit Smith in the end zone for the score. Tackle Henry Reynolds' attempted placement went wide.

THREATENED EARLIER

One of the most remarkable displays of Gardner-Webb power was recorded prior to the touchdown, when the locals gained possession on their own 10-yard strip and moved 75 yards to the Asheville 15 before running out of gas. A 58-yard conversion to End Bill Bates, the team's pass receiving threat, sparked the advance.

Gardner-Webb forced the Biltmore crew deep into their own territory again following the halftime intermission, as Smith landed a boot on their 18-yard line and a 15-yard penalty revealed the shadow of the goal posts. However, excellent running by Halfback Guy Melton and Fullback Dietz enabled Biltmore to reach their territory.

GO ONCE MORE

A third threat by the G-W eleven in the fourth quarter fell short. Taking over on their own 43-yard line, the Bulldogs met head-on Garrison traveled to the 21, and a second pass to Bates clicked on the 14. Robertson hit Fullback Smith on the 5 with a third pass, but a penalty intervened. The Asheville line stymied further attempts by the Bulldogs.

CARRY LOAD

Halfbacks James Garrison and Fullback Henry Smith were the top offensive punches for G-W. Garrison carried the leather 14 times, picked up 69 yards, an average of 4 per try.

Nevertheless, Asheville - Biltmore outgained the Bulldogs in yards rushing by a wide margin. However, the local line tightened down in the chances. A-B had only one first down in the half, while G-W had rolled up four.

G-W's passing attack was much better than expected. Quarterback Robertson showed 13 aerials, completed 5 for a total of 111 yards. Morgan tossed 8 for the air, completed 3, totaling 32 yards.
