

MISS MAZALENE CARTER

BY CYNTHIA COVINGTON

Miss Mazalene Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Carter of Pembroke, was the only Indian student to be admitted to Gardner-Webb College this year.

Miss Carter attended the Union Chapel school in Robeson county and the Pembroke High School. After high school, she entered Pembroke State College where she completed her freshman year of study.

When asked why she decided to transfer to Gardner-Webb, Miss Carter gave several reasons. Her father, a school teacher, is connected with the Baptist State Convention and works with the seven Baptist colleges in North Carolina. Through this work, he became acquainted with Dr. P. L. Elliott, president of Gardner-Webb. Quite impressed by her father's admiration of Dr. Elliott, and influenced by college literature, Miss Carter became interested in attending. She said that another reason which motivated her transfer from Pembroke State College was her desire to go to a college away from home.

The 19-year-old young lady said she was very excited about coming to Gardner-Webb although she had harbored fears as to how she would be received by her fellow students. "Now," she says, "I feel right at home and feel that I am one of you." She says she likes the friendly Christian atmosphere of the Gardner-Webb campus.

The next step in the educational ladder for this well-liked student will be attending a senior college where she will major in religious education.

ATHLETIC SCHOLARSHIP

The Board of Trustees met this month and voted to establish an athletic scholarship fund, to function solely through donations.

In several instances, friends of the college have wanted to help athletes, because a student cannot easily spend three or four hours a day on the athletic field, if he is working his way through college.

Mr. Lyman Martin, a former student of the college, made the first contribution.

Hats off to Gardner-Webb for another forward step!

COLLEGE HAS BOOTH AT CLEVELAND COUNTY FAIR

BY BETTY STATON

The students of Gardner-Webb College, under the direction of John Roberts, associate director of public relations, sponsored a booth at the Cleveland county fair, which was held September 21 through 25 in Shelby. Students and faculty members were on duty at this booth each day from 2 p. m. until 10 p. m. to give information concerning Gardner-Webb to those attending the fair.

The booth was gaily decorated with school pennants and pictures of the various buildings located on the campus, the faculty members, student activities, and sports. Various publications of the school including the yearbook, The Anchor; the newspaper, The Pilot; the catalog, The Log; The Alumni Quarterly, and other literature concerning Gardner-Webb were on display at the booth. A huge sign listing courses offered at the college was placed where everyone could see it.

The purpose of this project was to publicize Gardner-Webb College and to create a better fellowship between the college and the surrounding communities.

CO-ED THEATER HAS CINEMASCOPE

BY BILL SITTON

Cinemascope has come to Boiling Springs. With the showing of the picture BROKEN LANCE, the Co-Ed Theater put into use an investment of several hundred dollars worth of new equipment. Although the change is not yet complete, there are only a few minor details yet to be finished.

The new curved screen was installed by Wellie Hamrick and his staff. The screen is 25 feet wide and 15 feet high. It is constructed of a material that has a greater reflecting surface, necessary because of the greater size, than was on the old screen.

The lenses, made by Bauch and Lomb, are the same as the ones used in large theaters. The only difference is the primary lens, used in front of the Cinemascope lens.

GARDNER-WEBB ON THE AIR

BY RALPH JOYNER

October 1, at 4:15 p. m., Gardner-Webb college went on the air with its first radio program of the 1954-55 school year. The program originated in the Huggins Memorial Communication Center, located in the E. B. Hamrick Building on the Gardner-Webb campus. Featured on this initial broadcast was the Rev. John Farrar, pastor of the local church. He discussed the relationship of the College student to the church and its pastor.

These broadcasts will continue throughout the current school year, being presented each Friday afternoon at 4:15.

Ector Hamrick, a sophomore at Gardner-Webb, is to be the student announcer for these broadcasts. The programs are presented in co-operation with Radio Station WOHS in Shelby.

Programs for the month of October include Robert Carr, associate professor of music, Norman Harris, athletic coach, and the Baptist Student Union Council.
