

"Handy Andy" on receiving end of picture

THE PILOT SHUTTERBUG

By Beverly Turner

One person you can always see at ball games and other events of general interest is Charles Anderson Harmon Jr., known to us as "Andy." Whenever pictures are to be made, either for the Pilot, the annual, or just general news, "Dandy Andy" is always handy.

Born in Bessemer City, he graduated from Bessemer City High School, where he made pictures for the yearbook and paper. Andy was president of the Science Club, president of the band, assistant editor of the annual, and assistant business manager for the newspaper. He also played basketball and was a member of the Radio Club, the Journalism Club, and the Glee Club.

Andy attended Wake Forest before coming to Gardner-Webb as a sophomore this year. At W. F. he made pictures for the yearbook, the paper, and the student magazine.

Our 18-year-old shutterbug enjoys all sports, especially basketball. He also plays tennis, baseball, golf, and chess.

Although physics was Andy's hardest subject in high school, it was also his favorite subject. He jokingly says that his ambition is to have a million dollars, a big house, fourteen kids, and a harem. In a more serious tone, however, he admits that he would like to go into either science or photography. When he finishes at G.-W., he would like to go to Wake Forest or to Florida State.

Andy's slogan is, "Have camera. Will Travel."

STUDENT-FACULTY GAME THRILLS

By Doug Goans

Yep, it was that time again. The time was set for the grudge battles between the students and the faculty. The faculty won the girl's game by 42-12, while the students took the boy's game 35-24.

In the first game the faculty, led by Miss Jones, Mrs. Haynes, and Miss Reaume, kept pouring points through to almost run the students off the floor. Then in the third quarter the students went to drastic methods as Dorsey Hogart and his cheerleaders took the floor to stop Mrs. Haynes. However, if only added confusion is five basketballs took the court, to make it more interesting, Mike Goodman and Don Bridges stated it was a good game from where they sat, should be added that they were the referees. Next year plans may be made to call it the "Believe 3 or not" game.

In the second game the students, led by Jerry Callcutt and Bill Nix, ran over the best and beloved 71 wardens 35-24. Ed Loh played center and opposite Coach Blackburn and did a great job leading for the rebounds. Coach Blackburn and Mr.

Haynes pulled down most of the rebounds or the acuity with Ed Loh, Jerry Callcutt, and Carl Neal, getting most of them for the students.

This was a better organized game than the first and easy to watch and keep with. Jerry Callcutt and Bill Nix were the stars, leading the students with Coach Blackburn leading the faculty scoring with 13.

MR. BURRIS
February Top Prof

By Beverly Turner

One of the newest members of our faculty is Professor Craven A. Burris. Mr. Burris was born September 11, 1920, at Wingate, N. C. He graduated from Wingate High School, where he was class salutatorian and president of the student body.

At Wingate College, "Al" met his wife-to-be, Miss Jane Russell, from Mount Gilead, N. C. They were married June 19, 1945, and they now have a daughter, "Ce-Ce," age 2½ years.

From Wingate, Mr. Burris went to Wake Forest, Southern and Southern Seminars and Duke University. At Wake Forest, he was president of the Student Legislature in 1940-51.

In 1953, Mr. Burris came to Gardner-Webb to teach world history and government. Before coming to Gardner-Webb, he had a naval officer's commission. He is a Christian school with a tremendous potential in American education, and "like it."

Our Top Prof has brown hair and blue eyes and is 5'8" tall. He likes barbecued steak better than any other food. He enjoys teaching students who have reachable minds and who are stimulated with an intellectual curiosity for all of life.

Mr. Burris believes that a reward is given to each person as a sacred trust in which God calls to us. The reward is the future, here and now. His ambition is to find his place in the field of Christian education.

Mr. Burris wants G.-W. students to remember him as one who gave them some stimulation to think for themselves.

Craven A. Burris

grity, unwholesome attitudes, and unchristian motives.

There should be no person in the community better educated than the minister. To the extent this is violated his leadership is impeded even while his personal integrity remains above reproach.

The minister's undergraduate work should be in liberal arts. No qualities of soul or purpose or motive will take the place of that. The minister should have a good background in literature, science, history, sociology, psychology, and government. These should be seasoned with at least some introductory work in music, art, and drama.

It is the job of the seminary to provide the specialty training of the minister after college just as a medical school provides the after-college training of a physician. Law school follows college training wherein one has had "pre-law" courses. Seminary work is graduate work in a specialized field. A broad liberal education is "pre-ministerial" work.

In a real sense we do not have on this campus any ministerial students in any more than we have medical or law students. We have pre-law students, pre-medical students, and pre-ministerial students. The ministry cannot otherwise be a calling of professional rank.

But suppose one may not, or definitely cannot, go on from college to seminary. What should he do? He should still take a liberal arts course. He should not—ever—major in Bible or religious education. A Bible major is a decidedly inefficient background to serve as a basis for seminary training. A broad education aids in the attainment of an open mind and helps one to get rich dividends from private study, extension work, clinics, and conferences.

On the other hand there is no college that is able to provide the training in Bible and theology a minister needs. But if his college training is broad and thorough, the minister can gain much on his own after college.

The writer of these lines is a minister and was a pastor for ten years. He is for the pastor. Yet he knows that a minister is not necessarily qualified to counsel or advise a pre-ministerial student just by virtue of his being a pastor. Pastors are men of strong convictions, and sometimes their convictions are stronger than their knowledge and background are broad. Many pastors are qualified to help the ministerial student.

A young man looking toward the ministry should seek counsel where he can find it. But the decision in the final analysis is both private and personal.

The Bulldogs' next game was a conference tilt, their third, and it was at home with Wings. Wingate had not yet played a regular season conference game so it was their first. The score was 99-63 the largest margin that the Bulldogs have had in their season.

Big Bobby Frank, the 6'10" center for Wings, led his team with 19 points followed by Kiyul Leonard, "Smiley" Holleman, and Bob Sumner with 14 points each.

David Ezzell with 15 points and Don DuZan with 14 led the Bulldogs in the last few weeks.

The last game before exams was when they handed W. C. Freshman their Freshman team. The Bulldogs gave the hardwoods victorious as they handed W. C. Freshman a 76-69 defeat.

With the bullets led all the way, but with the Catsmounts constantly threatening. The longest lead ended when G. W. was topped by W. C. tied it at 48 all in the Purple Hurricane.
