tween Dracula and Casper Milchoast. Do then what every woman longs to do — take the male rat and begin the wifely job of turning him into a meek male mouse.

(P. S. Because of strenuous objection to the last sentence in this article and because this columnist wants to stay in favor with the fairer sex, he is meekly submitting to pressure and is suggesting that his readers ignore the last sentence in the article and substitute the following: "Do then what every woman longs to do — take the man and make him lord of your life, master of his castle, and king of the world.")

ABOUT THE PILOT

The Pilot staff plans to publish three more issues this year, thus making a total of seven publications. The March and April issues will welcome in spring the time when "a young man's fancy lightly turns to love." (The young woman's fancy has been there throughout all of Leap Year!)

The May issue will be devoted mainly to the 1960 graduates and will be edited by this year and next year's editors. The Pilot staff hopes you will continue to show the interest in the paper demonstrated in the past.
