

Reflections Over The Past Year

Roland Henderson — To me, the most memorable event of this past year was the recent series of campaign speeches during the Student Government elections.

Doyt Hoffman—As this year comes to an end, I think about the people that I probably will never see again, and I remember our track meets when I always finished behind Ronny Freize in the 2-mile race.

Gerald Luckadoo — I think I have learned this year to really study and improve my grades despite my time handicap.

Shirley Luckadoo—The most memorable occasion in this year was the day I learned that I had won a scholarship to Furman University, for it will enable me to continue my education.

Robert Brown — Homecoming night when we beat Chowan and won the regional championship, and eating steaks after returning from the Georgia Military game are the things I'll remember most at G-W.

Don Horn—The most interesting thing for me during this past year was working with the Baptist Student Union and Christian Volunteer Band.

Paul Waters—I was deeply moved by discovering that I had passed my first nine weeks of English 202, especially since I had very little preparation for this course.

Dion Rankin—Seeing Clayton Chriswell get the Junior College All-American was a big event for Gardner-Webb students.

James L. Wells—My most important event during this year happened shortly after the nine weeks this semester when I made 100 on a music test under Miss Miller.

Larry McEntire—Finding out I couldn't get married for another year because I dated "Miss Pickens" is the thing I will remember most about this college year.

Ronnie Robinson—Being on the team that won the first Basketball Tournament in the history of Gardner-Webb College was the most exciting event of the year for me.

Troy McMahon—I believe the most memorable event of my sophomore year was going to the University of North Carolina to take part in the United Nations Model General Assembly as a delegate from Gardner-Webb.

Emily Curtis—I feel that the best thing that happened to me this year was when I found out I could come back to G-W for the second semester.

Rebecca Kiser—I will never forget all of the wonderful friendships I have made during this year.

Ann McSwain—I will never forget the attitude and calmness shown by the teachers as well as the students during the critical times of our nation, the Cuban crisis. Mickey Elmore—Our Day Student Basketball team winning the Intramural Basketball Championship was a happy occasion for me.

Richard Bruggeman—I count as my greatest accomplishment during this year learning to think things out and come to my own conclusions.

Eugene Grigg—My Red Letter Day was the day Mr. Lamb had a score throat and asked me to teach his Speech class. I really learned a lot that day!

Keith A. Wilson—My most memorable event was giving Kathy, my future wife, her diamond in the graveyard. It was an odd place but the mission was accomplished.

Bill Smart — The most memorable moment of my sophomore year was August 25, 1962, which I became a married man.

Benny Painter—My most thrilling moment was receiving a 92 on a math test which proved to me that I could pass math if I tried.

Reggie High—The most memorable event for me this year was on February 22, 1963, in East High Gym where we won the basketball tournament. I will never forget the feeling of accomplishment I felt when we received the championship trophy. We played Wingate who had beaten us twice during the regular season.

Alfred Greene — The most interesting thing that happened at Gardner-Webb this year was the beginning of a new dormitory for men. To me this means enlargement of our college, a thing that I am keenly interested in.

George Norville—The day I save the business office

$230.00 for my second semester fee was an unforgettable occasion for me.

Howard Williams, Jr.—The day I got my job as Sound Engineer for the plays and other special events was my Red Letter day.

Johnny Heffner—I remember vividly the week and a half after I sent my application to Baylor University. I could not study or eat until I got the reply. I will enter Baylor this fall semester.

Kenneth Rayfield—The most outstanding event of my sophomore year, was the birth of my son, Jeffery.

Darinda Camp—I will never forget the morning I got out of bed sleepy and sprayed my hair with insect spray instead of spray net.

Enoch Bridges—The most memorable part of this year was the Christmas vacation.

Karl Hedrick, Jr.—The day one of my buddies mixed the wrong acids together in Organic Chemistry laboratory was an exciting day for me.

Dee Ann Bridges—Exciting occasions are the nights we throw girls in the showers when they start going steady. We can't afford gifts so we give showers of blessings.

Larence Campbell—The most memorable week of my sophomore year at Gardner-Webb was the revival week conducted by our fellow students. It thrilled me to know we still have sincere young people dedicated to a specific purpose in life.

Mike Pearson—I shall always remember being on two championship teams in one year and the defeat of Chowan in football and Wingate in basketball.

Martha Bailey—The small, funny incidents that happen everyday and go unnoticed by many are the things that really make college life. For instance, I'll never forget the afternoon Troy McMahon was standing on the corner up town jumping all the parking meters and trash cans and the girls paid him ten cents or twenty-five cents to keep jumping. He made enough to buy us a snack.

Herman Hamrick — My most memorable event this year has been getting through a whole semester without making at least one D or F.

Tommy Petty—My marriage on January 27, 1963, was my best day this year.

Paul Long—I will remember the day I started the countdown and realized two years isn't long.

Heartache

Heartache comes . . .

Inasurmountable . . .

Slowly, yet surely it comes.

Heartache engulfs—

Conquers.

Stealthly, painfully it comes.

Darkness . . . Tears

Life diminishes . . .

Disintegrates.

Loneliness and pain are triumphant.

home, to America. The choir sang "Stout Hearted Men" and "This Is My Country." Several children in the crowd ran around the court with the Happy Wanderer. Following her exit, the Recessional of the court began.

There was a reception on the lawn and the crowd of approximately three hundred people met the May Queen and her attendants. Miss Lynn Smither, physical education director, was the committee chairman. Mrs. Robert Gidney was director of Music, and Nancy Dyson and Sandra Carpenter wrote the script of "The Happy Wanderer." Diane James was in charge of publicity, and Brenda Rink designed the programs. Linda Bowman was the accompanist throughout the entire program.

Mr. Mike Gordon, Mr. Norman Harris, Larry McIntyre, Charles Hall, and Miss Ruth Kiser also contributed to the success of the May Day festivities.
