G-W Honors

"Anything that a legislative body may do, any speeches great leaders may make are not worth two cents unless you care." This was the response of Dr. Johnny Cash after he received his honorary Doctor of Humanities degree on September 28.

One of the largest crowds to ever assemble in the Piedmont attended the activities of "Johnny Cash Day." The Ernest Spangler Stadium which normally seats 6500 held a crowd of over 12,000 for the free concert and an estimated 3000 for the convocation. Although a record crowd attended, 19,000 were expected to be present.

The activities began with a concert in the stadium at 10:30 a.m. Surrounding high schools and elementary schools throughout Boiling Springs and Shelby were in attendance. The concert was Johnny Cash's attempt to do something for the student body.

June Carter Cash and 18-month-old John Carter were on campus for the festivities. Mrs. Cash expressed her personal appreciation to Gardner-Webb for the honor. She along with her mother and sisters participated in the morning concert.

Johnny Cash with his entire company band was on campus for his best-seller, "A Boy Named Sue." His troupe included:

Johnny Cash

the Carter Family, Tennessee Three, and Statler Brothers.

Glen Shirley, a member of the Johnny Cash touring company, was present as an honored guest. Shirley was paroled five months ago from Folsom Prison where he served for thirteen years. He met Cash during one of the prison performances. Shirley wrote the song "Coyoteone Chapel" which is on Cash's album "Folsom Prison."

Entertainment celebrities who were on the special guest list invited by Cash included President Richard Nixon, Billy Graham, Glen Campbell, and many others. President Nixon acknowledged and expressed his regrets at being unable to attend. Also Dr. Poston received communication from John Wayne and Kirk Douglas expressing their regrets, and a phone call from actor Jerry Lewis to the same effect.

Before receiving his doctorate, Mrs. Cash and his wife and son were honored at a luncheon in the Charles I. Dover Campus Center. Over 700 persons had been invited and some 650 were present for the roast-buff meal. At the luncheon, Cash received a round of applause. He was presented life-time membership in the Bulldog Club.

President Poston presented recommendations for a Decade of Advance to the Board of Trustees in 1961 and asked their approval to proceed with plans which would make, among other things, Gardner-Webb a senior college by the end of 1971. Almost every thing projected in 1961 has already become a reality.
