Dr. Ratliff is a graduate of Baylor University and received his Bachelor of Divinity and Doctor of Theology from Southern Seminary. He has written regularly for The Student magazine and has served on the faculty at Ridgecrest and Glorieta Assemblies. Also he has written a layman's introduction to theology entitled Because We Believe, which was published in 1970

Mr. Ronald Wells, Minister of Music at the First Baptist Church in Spartanburg will be coordinating the music for the week. Work-ing with him will be Mr. Bob Decker who is organizing a revival combo and a student choir, and Teresa Chandler, who will be

The fall revival is being financed by Staley Distinguished Christian Scholars Lecture Program which has sponsored pre-vious revivals and religious emphasis' weeks on campus.

The spring religious emphasis week will be in the form of a Religious Festival of Art. Religious art, drama, and music will all be a part of the festival.

Dr. Philip Landgrave, a com

"One Way" has been selected as Baptist Theological Seminary will be on campus to lead the music throughout the festival.

The musical "Celebrate Life" will be presented by the Student Volunteer Choir and the choral work "The Church" will be presented by the Ensemble. Also a new musical written especially by Dr. Landgrave may be performed by the College Chorus.

Paintings and sculpture will be exhibited on campus and there will be a touring exhibit by Corita Kent in the library.

The fall revival and the spring religious emphasis week are annual events on campus

ANCHOR EDITOR NAMED

The 1972-73 editor of the AN-CHOR is John Fowler, a senior from Cowpens, South Carolina. His assistant editor is Bud Thomas, a rising sophomore.

Fowler and Thomas attended a vearbook worshop at Furman University July 25-29. This workshop included seminars on type-setting, photography, and general layout of the yearbook. Sponsored by Keys Printing Company who publishes the ANCHOR, the workshop was attended by high schools and colleges located in Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina, and South

Fowler stated that he hoped the ANCHOR would reflect student ideas and interests. A new feature is being added to the yearbook, Miss Anchor. She must be a senior woman who will be selected on the criteria of poise, school spirit, scholastic achievement, and

The yearbook will be a large publication than in past years. The yearbook is financed through the office of publication and outside contributors. There are twentytwo students on this year's staff.

The agenda for the Friday night dinner meeting included a prese tation on orientation and registration, by Mr. Bill Briggs. Also Dr. Eugene Poston presented a few opening remarks at the dinner.

During the Saturday session, discussions were under the headings of Trustees and Administra-tion, SGA and You, Academics at Gardner-Webb, and The Campus Environment. Some topics which were considered include residence hall life, guidance and counseling, publications, religious activities, alumni, business life, campus security, and graduation

"More women are recognizing that Gardner-Webb College is able to meet their educational, social and spiritual needs. I feel the present trend of more female applicants will continue. They see that our campus atmosphere is more conducive to the life style they are seeking. While the college exposes its students to the realities of life it is offering a more pleasant social, cultural and educational environment than is foun dat some other colleges."

A positive attitude towards the year's activities prevailed throughout orientation for freshmen as they were exposed to the various areas of campus life. A worship service for freshmen and their parents began the week's activities. The service, led by Dr. Eugene Poston emphasized the spiritual aspect of the college program, Parent orientation, a SGA reception, academic orientation, SGA orientation, intramurals, student activities and religious life on campus were introduced to the freshmen during the week. Festive evenings included a talent show, a luau accompanied by Hawaiian dancers, a "Wit and Humor Hour" by professors, "Being a Bulldog, the movie, "A Walk in the Spring Rain" and two week-end concerts.
