

It's A Small World

This summer (June 12-27) ten students left from the Douglas Airport in Charlotte to travel 14,900 miles on a tour of the Mediterranean world.

After landing at Athens, they toured Greece for three days, seeing such historic sites as the Acropolis in Athens, Mars Hill where Paul preached, and the ancient remains of the City of Corinth.

Next they flew to Cairo, Egypt where among other things they took a boat trip on the Nile River and toured the pyramidal area and the ancient capital of Memphis.

After spending three days in Egypt they flew to Beirut, Lebanon. Upon seeing the magnificent temple remains of Baalbek, they toured in northern Lebanon visiting the historic God River and the town of Byblos from which the word "Bible" was derived.

The final six days of the tour were spent in Israel. During these exciting days they saw many of the outstanding sites throughout the country. They spent one night in a hotel right on the Mediterranean Sea in Ashdod and another night in a hotel on the beautiful shores of the Sea of Galilee. They left no stone unturned in the city of Jerusalem.

Final highlights of the tour were the drive down the entire length of the Dead Sea, visiting the Qumran Community, and touring the famous Clalad at Masada where the Jews made their last stand against the Romans in 72 A.D.

One alumna of Gardner-Webb, Marla Blanton of Lattimore, also took the study tour. Three students from other colleges went on the tour. They are: Anita Murrell, Bowling Springs; Ernest T. Moore, Charlotte; and Audrey Kilpatrick, Kenansville, N. C.

Before the students left on the tour they attended lectures and did assigned readings. They will receive three hours credit for the course entitled Religion 251 (Biblical Backgrounds). The tour leader was Dr. Van Murrell.

Next summer the Department of Religious Studies plans to sponsor another study tour which will follow the travels of St. Paul. If anyone is interested please contact Dr. Murrell and Dr. Hewitt.

Five Gardner-Webb students had the opportunity to go to Saltillo, Mexico to study. These students were Martha Wright, Judy Greene, Ewina Rymer, Tom Wylie, and Sam Hopkins. They left on June 4 and returned on July 15. They took subjects at the University International where all classes were conducted in Spanish.

While there, they had opportunities to attend fiestas, pinata parties, visit schools, plazas, important buildings, etc. They also had the chance to learn many of the customs of the Mexicans which proved to be very interesting.

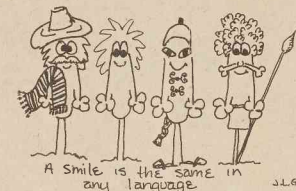

These students also had their embarrassing moments while in Mexico such as being escorted home by chief of police, asking for toilet paper and receiving a mop, and getting lost on the way to school.

While their stay in Mexico was spiced with both, good and bad events, all five students will agree that their trip proved to be a learning experience and a very enjoyable time.

G-W Graduate Now Recruiter

When Raymond Davis, admissions counselor, tells prospective students about Gardner-Webb he is speaking from experience. Born in Ashe County, N. C., he graduated from Gardner-Webb in 1972 with a B.S. in physical education. Now he is spending much of his time traveling to high schools representing the Bulldogs at "College Nights" and meeting with interested students about the college.

As a student, he led a busy life by working, helping, and leading in every way he could. During his sophomore year he was class president, vice-president of the Men's Affairs Council, and a member of the Alpha Nu Omega and Entertainment Committees. He represented the college in the National Entertainment Convention in Philadelphia. In both his sophomore and junior years, he was the assistant for all sports activities. Also in his junior year he was sports editor for the "Anchor" and Assistant Dorn Counselor at

Life-Long Dream Becomes Reality

There is a new staff personality on campus whose name is David Webb, a former student of Gardner-Webb who graduated in 1971 with a major in psychology. He is presently employed at the college under the official title of Assistant to the Director of Public Relations. Before coming to the college he worked at Belks in the City-Try Mail as Personnel and Office Manager.

As a student here at Gardner-Webb he was very active, being Vice-president of the Honor Society and then president of this organization the following year. He was also president of the day students class his sophomore and junior years. His senior year gave him the honor of being elected to Who's Who and he was also considered in the Top Ten.

Mr. Webb's interests include music and sports. In fact, he states that he is a "sports fanatic". This young man is also active in church and is an ordained deacon of Pleasant Ridge Baptist Church.

He is really excited about his position in the Public Relations department. His comments on his work here at the school are: "It has been my ambition and life-long dream to be on the staff at Gardner-Webb. I like what it stands for and like being a part of it. It has made me real happy to have the opportunity to work under a man of Mr. Bill Boyd's caliber."

Mens Affairs Council

In early September, the Men's Affairs Council officers were elected to represent the men's residence halls and portable housing students.

The president is Jeff Johnson, vice-president is Jeff McNeil, and elected secretary-treasurer was Bobby Jacobs. Mr. Martin Banner is the advisor for the council.

Mr. Banner stated that MAC handles "any minor rules and regulations less than the campus code." MAC is "striving to become less of a judiciary body and is attempting to establish planned programs and activities for the male resident students."

When he's not traveling or working in the admission's office, he spends much of his time participating in any kind of sport available. He also enjoys working with the BSU and other religious organizations and furthering his musical abilities, be it on the piano, guitar, or French harp.

In reflecting upon his new career at Gardner-Webb, Mr. Davis says, "I don't think I could have enjoyed any place I would have enjoyed more, than the total atmosphere and environment here at Gardner-Webb."

SGA Girl In Action

Candy Cline, a senior majoring in elementary education, is the new SGA secretary for the 1972-73 school year. Candy was born in Salisbury, N. C. on August 1, 1951 although her home is presently in Fallston, N. C. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Cline.

She was quite active in her high school being president of the Beta Club, a member of the Student Council, co-editor of the annual, and scorekeeper for the Basketball team. She attended Winthrop College in 1969-70 and came to Gardner-Webb in the fall of 1970. While here, she has been a member of the college chorus for two years, student senator her junior year, and is presently a member of SNEA.

This young lady has many interesting talents. Some of these include a love for cooking, sewing most of her own clothes, directing weddings, sketching and painting, and playing a tenor guitar. She also enjoys singing, dancing, and listening to stereo music.

Candy loves SGA work and states that "her purpose is to help Gardner-Webb have an active student government and not just another piece of deadwood. It has given me a lot of confidence and encouragement to get the job done thoroughly and on time."

Communication is the key in student government.
