Communication Studies Welcomes Two New Instructors: Film & TV

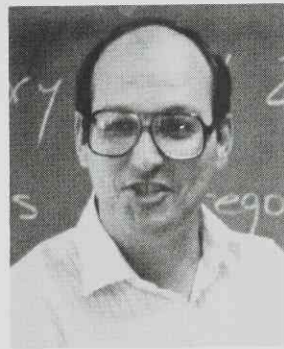

by Henry Doo
Students majoring in communication studies are pleased with the addition of two new classes: Television Broadcasting and Film.

Television Broadcasting is being taught by Tom Black, who has worked in radio and TV stations for more than fifteen years. Presently Black is the Editorial Page Editor for The Shelby Star. Prior to this, he worked for the North Carolina News Network in Raleigh and was the News Director at WSOC-TV. Black also taught a radio-television class at Gaston College.

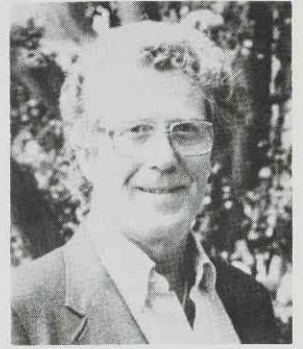

John Brock teaches the film class. Brock is a film producer associated with Earl Owensby Studios, Inc. in Shelby. He has produced several films, among them, Rutherford County Line, Hyperspace, and Death Driver. Brock is also president of John Brock Production, Inc. Like Black, Brock also has taught previously. Two years ago, Brock taught in the history department at Gardner-Webb.

Being a producer is not as easy as it sounds. "Basically, a producer has to deal with the packaging of a movie, putting together deals and distributing the movie worldwide," said Brock. With Brock's help and supervision, the film class is planning to make a short film, so the students will learn the process of making a movie.
