

Across the Editor's Desk

Roberta L. Borden

So many times I find myself filling my column with information that is so negative and even, at times, depressing. Finally an action of a person on campus has really struck me as being unselfish and with the true interest of Gardner-Webb at heart.

We've all been hearing about the much heralded inauguration of our President, Dr. Chris White, for weeks now. I'm sure all of you have gotten your invitations in the mail and have anxiously planned your attendance at the biggest event G-W has seen in many a year. Alas, do not fret but you will all have to reschedule April 8 as Dr. White himself has cancelled the festivities and has redirected the funds that were to be spent for the inauguration back into an account in order to expediate campus renovations.

Although Dr. White and his administration know that this contribution is small in comparison to the cited $1 million in dorm repairs which need to be performed, they do certainly feel it is a step in the right direction. It is a commendable gesture, seeing the President tightening his belt too, during a time when faculty members are teaching unpaid overload schedules and tuition is being raised 8%. I can't count the number of times I've heard fellow students criticizing the way money is spent or allocated at Gardner-Webb, certainly this action will cause more than a few members of the G.W. family to pause and reflect on the priorities of this college. Since we will not be having an organized appreciation of the President, let's not forget what he has done for us.
