

THE PILOT

Gardner-Webb College

SEPTEMBER 9, 1988

BOILING SPRINGS, NORTH CAROLINA

Gardner-Webb College Has Season Of Change

LEGEND

- 1 Reception Center (Security, Publications)
- 2 Lindsay Building (Psychology, Broyhill School of Management, Religion)
- 3 Elliott Hall (Communication Studies 2nd floor Davis School of Nursing 1st floor)
- 4 Craig Building (Education, English, Literary Magazine, Art)
- 5 Withrow Building (Math, Science)
- 6 Dover Campus Center (Cafeteria, Recreation Student Development, Student Government, Recreation)
- 7 Gardner Fine Arts Center (Music, Fine Arts)

Honors Program

By Lynn Bostic

Athletics have long been a tradition at GWC, but this year there is something different happening on campus. The 1988-89 school year has ushered in the beginning of a new era. Now, through the addition of an Honors Program at the Web, those who are very competitive in an academic sense are able to get a more in depth understanding, and a greater challenge via their studies, both in and outside the classroom.

Work on this new program was initiated a year, or so ago, by a group of professors, working with Dr. Frank Bonner, who were concerned that GWC did not offer this opportunity for its students. An Honors committee was formed, the members consisting of Barbara Burkett, Jim Taylor, Michael Leslie, Dennis Quinn, Tony Eastman and Rick Wilson, who upon leaving the school was replaced by Ted Monroe.

After much hard work by the committee the project took shape and is now in place. Being offered this semester are History 101H and English 101H, which are taught by Dr. Leslie and Dr. Quinn, respectively. Both of these classes will offer a different approach to the traditional classes which have been taught.

Currently there are 17 members of the Honors program. As each individual chooses his/her major areas of study, they will be able to contract with a professor in their field and can then design Honors courses that will be beneficial for them.

In the coming weeks and months, many activities have been planned for these students.

continued on page three

By Henry Styron

Welcome to the first issue of The Pilot. Those new students may assume that our wonderful college has always been like this. Those old students, however, looked around after the first few days of classes and said, "What happened?"

In case you have not noticed, good ole' Gardner-Webb underwent several changes this summer; some major, some minor.

Many familiar people are in new offices. Dr. Gil Blackburn is now the Associate Dean of Academic Affairs and Luanne Scales Acting Registrar. Dean of the newly-created office of Academic Advising is Mr. Melvin Lutz. The new Library Director is Valerie Parry. Now chairing departments are Dr. Lamb, Dr. Hunt, Dr. Taylor, Dr. Chesky, and Dr. Quinn.

David Helton is the new Chief of Security. Richard Franklin heads the infant Student Development program with Vickie Webb as his secretary. Holding both the Athletic Directorship and the Head Coach of the football team is Woody Fish. Pat Davis is now the Director of Student Development Programming, and Ruth Kiser the Director of Resident Life.

Another major change at Gardner-Webb is the beautification of the campus. Residence Halls are in better shape, with new windows, furniture, carpeting, and fresh paint. These improvements cost the school over $100,000 and Dean Franklin says that he is committed to even more improvements. The Campus Center began its major overhaul during the summer with new furnishings, different flowers and shrubbery, and those magnificent swings. Plans are underway to open a commuter lounge in the bottom of the Campus Center, to install tables and chairs, and to create a place where students can get checks cashed.

Along with the physical changes, many places have new names, while others have the same name but are no longer abbreviated. For example, the C.I.D. is now the Dover Campus Center; O.M.G. is now the Gardner Fine Arts Center; the Elliot House is now the Reception Center; and the L.Y.C.C. (Lutz-Yelton Convocation Center) now encompasses the Dover Theatre, Hart Concourse, and the Paul Porter Arena. However, Stroup and Mauney ("strap" and "moonie") dorms are still named after their benefactors.

There are several new security procedures in effect, largely initiated by David Helton. Of these, the new parking policies are the most complicated, with red spaces for faculty and staff, blue for handicapped, white for boarding students, and yellow for commuters. Security is also getting a new radiotelephone system that will enable them to be on call 24 hours a day.

Changes
Editorial
From Your Editors
Barking Bulldog
President's Corner
Sports
Cafe Manager
WGWC

Page One
Page Two
Page Two
Page Three
Page Three
Page Four
Page Four Page Four