New visitation policy discussed in senate

by Kevin Bess
staff writer

Student Senate is studying a proposal which would extend visitation to 7 days a week - but the penalties are raising concerns among a few senators.

The executive committee of Student Government Association (SGA) proposed a new visitation policy at the third senate meeting this year. The proposal allowed for visitation Monday through Thursday from 3 p.m. to 10 p.m., Friday and Saturday from 12 p.m. until 12 a.m., and Sunday from 12 p.m. until 10 p.m.

Along with the new hours, the proposal also included a new set of violation penalties. The penalty for a first offense, under this proposal, is a $100 fine and disciplinary probation; for a second offense, the penalty is suspension from Gardner-Webb; for a third offense, the penalty is expulsion from Gardner-Webb.

In the presentation of the proposal, which was formulated by Residence Hall Association last semester and resubmitted by the SGA executive officers at the third senate meeting, Jeff Price, vice president of SGA and chair of the Student Senate, explained that the willingness to accept more severe penalties for visitation violations would show that the students would accept responsibility along with the freedom given by the new policy.

Discussion took place and opposition arose from a few senators including Richie Ambrose, senior class president. Ambrose said the penalties were too stiff for the violation. He expressed support for more visitation, but he disagreed with the increase in penalties.

One sentence in the penalties section which would carry the first offense over into the whole career of a student was amended to limit the time period to one year. The rest of the penalties passed along with the entire document.

After the floor was opened to the gallery for comment, a student observer expressed concern over how duty would increase for each resident advisor to police visitation in order to enforce the new penalties.

A motion for a re-count was made, and Ambrose took this opportunity to make a motion to table the proposal until the next scheduled senate meeting. The proposal was successfully tabled and discussion will continue on this issue in the next senate meeting. Students may attend senate meetings.

G-W Opera performs Mozart

by Andrew White
staff writer

The GWU Opera Theatre, directed by Dr. Fern, will present live opera to over 1,200 school children, who will again delight in the art of opera. The 1993 performance contains scenes from Mozart's popular opera, "The Magic Flute," October 28 - 30 in the Dover Theatre at 8 p.m.

For the past seventeen years, GWU Opera Theatre has brought opera to over 11,500 Cleveland County fifth graders, as well as other attendees of performances on campus.

Jason Dula will sing the role of "Papageno" in "The Magic Flute" and is joined by Amalie Hinson as "Papagena" in one of the most popular duets in all of music.

The second half of the program is comprised of an operatic interpretation by Mark Schweizer of "Goldilocks and the Three Bears."

This half of the program will feature appearances by Audrey Sloan, Coach Woody Fish, and Dr. Tony Eastman. Joe Ervin, Dee Yoder, and Scott Elliot are student performers.

'Dogs beat Catawba in fall tennis action

by Chad Maddox
sports writer

The Gardner-Webb men's tennis team won its only fall match against South Atlantic Conference foe, the Catawba Indians, by a score of 6-3.

The Bulldogs almost put the match out of reach by winning four out of the first six matches.

The #1 ranked player, Doug Clark, set the tone by winning a tough three-setter 4-6, 6-4, 7-5. Clark found himself trailing in the match but fought back to get the win.

Senior and #4 player, Scott Willis, had a match that was filled with many shots that most professionals could not make. There were shots down the lines and shots between the legs that were winners. Willis made quick work of his opponent, winning 6-2, 6-3.

Other single match winners included Chad Lefteris and Brian Reijngoud.

The Bulldogs shut the door on the Indians by stealing two out of three doubles matches. The winners were the teams of Brian Reijngoud and Preston Davis 6-2, 4-6, 6-2 and Scott Willis and Chad Lefteris.

Constitution passage hits a snag

by Greg Carpenter
staff writer

The Student Senate will be going back to review the new constitution it has already passed, on a recommendation by the Student Life Committee.

The Student Life Committee met on October 8 to give recommendations concerning the new Student Government Association Constitution which has already been passed and voted into effect by the Student Senate.

It was recommended by the committee to review the constitution, with outside help, in order to correct language and inconsistencies present in the document.

Students were scheduled to vote on the new constitution on October 12, but the voting will be postponed until the document is revised.

Students were invited to comment on the new constitution and some students did respond. Their comments were heard by the committee and the members of the executive body of SGA.

The executive officers of SGA hoped to present the constitution to the Gardner-Webb Board of Trustees this month, but it has to be voted on by the students and submitted for the senior staff's approval first, so the possibility of presenting it to the board seems doubtful.
