Hamrick Building to get much needed renovations

by Rebekah Cloninger
staff writer

To celebrate its 50th anniversary, the Dover Foundation has donated Gardner-Webb University one million dollars to renovate of the E. B. Hamrick Building.

The total estimated cost for this renovation however, is approximately three million dollars. Established in 1944 by Dover Textiles, the Dover Foundation first gave $22,000 to support G-W in the 1940's. In 1990, the foundation contributed one million dollars to be used on renovating the Charles I. Dover Campus Center (DCC).

The building will house the undergraduate Broyhill School of Management and the graduate MBA program. Renovations will include 7 classrooms, 16 offices and a 310 seat auditorium. There will be come additions to the building: stairwells, bathrooms, and elevators to make it handicapped accessible.

The Hamrick Building was completed in 1925, and was originally called the Memorial Building. It was later renamed in honor of a prominent local merchant by the name of Elijah Bly Hamrick in the early 40's.

The building originally was used for chapel, held 3 times a week, which was mandatory with assigned seats.

Renovations for the E. B. Hamrick Building are necessary due to two fires. The first fire was on November 12, 1937, and the second was in the early 80's. Even after the first fire in 1937, the building was still used for offices until the mid 80's when usage was no longer necessary, as new buildings were being constructed.

The outside of the Hamrick Building was renovated in the early 90's. New doors, windows, guttering, and a new roof were added to enhance the appearance of the building.

Many students see the Hamrick Building as a place for hanging out. Soon it will be busy with construction crews as they restore one the oldest buildings on our campus

Dr. Paul Jolley says good-bye to Gardner-Webb

by Wendy Davidson & Jason Farr
staff writers

Having served Gardner-Webb for more than 33 years, Dr. Paul Jolley will say good-bye as he plans to retire at the end of this semester.

After graduating from Appalachian State with his Bachelor's Degree, Dr. Jolley pursued his Master's at Appalachian and Chapel Hill. He received his D.Ed from Florida State University. He has taught mathematics for 43 years. While at Gardner-Webb, Dr. Jolley has taught everything from Sets & Logic to Graduate Level Math for Teachers.

When asked how G-W has changed since coming here, Dr. Jolley said, "It has grown from about 500 students in 1962 to its current enrollment of 2300. I think the biggest change has been the upgrade from college to university status."

While Dr. Jolley has many memories that he will take with him, one in particular sticks out in his mind.

"I'll never forget the time that a cafeteria worker attacked the assistant manager and would possibly have killed him had I not separated them. The assistant manager spent several days in the hospital as a result of the attacking."

Dr. Jolley has served Gardner-Webb in many facets during his tenure. He served as Department Chair for 17 years, Faculty representative for 10 years and Faculty Marshall for 1 1/2 years. He is a member of Westview Baptist Church in Shelby.

When asked why he was retiring, Dr. Jolley replied, "I want to enjoy life with my retired wife (Maxine). I plan on traveling, playing golf and enjoying the grandchildren.

Dr. Jolley would like to leave these words for the students, "You can only get the education you are paying for if you devote your time and effort to learn all that is available from your professors."
