

Question of the Week:

Do you think the Confederate flag belongs on the South Carolina Capitol Building?

Student Voices:

IAN FESSLER, sophomore

James Flint/ The Seahawk

"In order for society to progress we must, as a whole, digress away from racial innuendoes. The rebel flag elicits certain confrontational feelings among the races thus it should not be hung in public."

BRANDON HILLIS, sophomore

James Flint/ The Seahawk

"I don't feel the rebel flag should be displayed anywhere because of the negative connotations that arise from it. It promotes a time in our country that was racist and did not treat human beings as if they were equal."

ALLISON GARDNER, freshman

"Definitely not. Maybe I am biased because I am a Yankee, but rebel flags are extinct. I feel the rebel flag represents racism, and that is not what we're about."

James Flint/ The Seahawk

DERRICK HEGLAR, junior

"It's been there for 100 plus years. Why change it now? It's southern heritage. I don't think it should be taken down because it's a part of the South Carolina flag and it does not symbolize slavery."

Kristie Singer/ The Seahawk
