Fall Intramurals to begin shortly

BRAD HUTCHENS

As classes begin and the UNCW campus comes alive again, intramural sports teams are getting organized for the fall season.

This semester's scheduled events range from tennis, flag football and outdoor basketball, to pocket billiards and even table tennis, in addition to many more. Teams can be male, female, or co-ed. Schedules are posted on the Internet at www.uncwil.edu/stuaff/camprec, as well as around campus or in the campus recreation office in the Student Recreation Center.

Tennis and flag football will kick off the 2000 fall intramural season. According to Tim McNeilly, assistant director of campus recreation and intramurals, flag football is a highly popular sport among the student participants. Even so, still only an average of ten percent of the UNCW student body has participated in intramurals during the past three years.

The Campus Recreation Office has expressed great interest in involving more on-campus participants. As of last spring, only thirty percent of all intramural participants were living on campus. According to McNeilly, "Not as much (dorm to dorm competition occurs) as we would like." He encouraged dorms to challenge each other, "...in not just one (intramural sport), but in a lot of activities."

Intramurals are a great way to get involved in campus life. According to Derrick Heglar, a senior Resident Assistant who has participated in intramurals each year of his UNCW career, intramurals have benefited him in many ways. "I've learned team work, and bonding through camaraderie to accomplish a common goal." Heglar is helping members of the sixth floor at Galloway Hall become more involved in campus life through starting intramural football teams. Heglar gave advice to new students to get involved early by joining "flag football teams, because it is the [most popular] intramural on campus." Students can obtain sign-up sheets along with the schedules at the Campus Recreation Office.

In addition to teams for intramurals, opportunities are also available for referees. The position is paid, and those interested must attend clinics to learn the basic rules of each sport they wish to officiate. The clinics' schedules are printed along with the intramurals schedule.

Play will begin the first week of September, and time is running out to form teams.
