White ribbon campaign kicks off second year, targeting sexual violence SOMER STAHL

STAFF WRITER

White ribbons will be given to men on campus next week in an effort to gather support for the White Ribbon Campaign. For the second year in a row, UNC Wilmington's police find fraternity members and male athmarijuana letes will unite in a nationwide effort to fight violence against women. According to Brian Hemphill, associate dean of students, the university has planned a variety of events to support the campaign, which began in Canada in 1990. The campaign began at the Ecole Polytechnique University of Montreal where one man murdered fourteen women. That year, 90 percent of the men in Canada wore a white ribbon to speak out against violence towards women, and the campaign, but I think it's saying a tradition has since spread through-letes are going to all measures to promote this type of leadership. It's a big effort and it does make a difference," said Keith Huxley, a member of the Chi Phi fraternity and co-chair of the White Ribbon Project in charge of ordering and distributing ribbons on campus.

Huxley also expressed appreciation for fellow co-chair Steve Hernandez, a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Hemphill, as well as Phillip Brown of University Relations, holds Huxley's optimistic point of view. Both agree that UNCW should see an increase in participation and support of the White Ribbon Campaign this year.
