Miss Mims, whose office will remain in the Liberal Arts Building for the remainder of the year, will assist with the transfer of records and with arrangements for Summer School programs related to the out-of-class activities and services during the summer.

'Fling' Weekend Is Success

The students of Saint Andrews launched another tradition the week end of May 18-20 as the first Saint Andrews College week end began with a carnival on the causewalk and selected spots of the Student Center. The various novelties of the carnival were aided by a very cooperative moon, Candied apples, a raffle, a fishing booth, a slave auction, an archaic juke-box, and even a legal device for drowning young co-eds in water, rice, and oatmeal were the interesting attractions on the causewalk.

A fortune teller was located in a tent on the peninsula assisted by local gypsies. A photography booth allowed many memorable snapshots to be taken. The "multitudinous mysteries of the universe" were dealt with by the Delphic Oracle flown in from heaven knows where. An informal dance, which was held in the main lounge of the Student Center, followed the carnival. The B. S. Plairs Combo played as the dancers twisted and even tried other types of dancing.

Saturday after classes the festivities began again with a concert on the lawn between the library and the lake. The Catalinas and the Olympics teamed up and presented a fine program of modern music for the enthusiastic spectators. Following the "jivy" afternoon, the hungry students quickly crossed the campus for the Hawaiian Luau complete with roast pig, which was prepared by the Prophet Company. The food was very attractive as were the girls who served it. A special hula was performed by some of the talented dancers in grass skirts.

After the luau a feeling of expectancy descended over the dormitories as the campus made a shift from the informal mode to the formal. A little before eight the young women in beautiful gowns and the gentlemen of Saint Andrews began to leave for the National Guard Armory where they found a spring dance of sym-
