

On And Off Campus

by Gill Rock

Last week six St. Andrews students attended the spring convention of the North State Student Government Association (NSSGA) held at Elon College. Just what is NSSGA and why is St. Andrews a member of this organization are two questions that many students are interested in.

NSSGA had its beginning in 1949 with several small North Carolina colleges. The organization has grown since then to ten members — Lenoir Rhyne, Appalachian State Teachers, Atlantic Christian, Catawba, Pfeiffer, Western Carolina, High Point, Elon, Guilford, and St. Andrews. Several of the goals of these colleges are found in the Preamble of the NSSGA Constitution. To further "Student Centered Campus Organizations," to "create better educational standards," to "improve the total welfare of students" and to recognize the "rights and responsibility of the Students to the school, the State, the Nation and God . . ."

NSSGA, which has its Home Office at Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C., is financed by membership dues of thirty-five dollars a year per college. It serves as an information center between member colleges and sets up the machinery with which the members can discuss problems concerning student government, judicial matters and campus social life. Workshops have been an effective method in discovering what kind of changes can be made in the different institutions to bring about a more workable student association. In the just recent Spring Conference, attended by more than fifty delegates (Bob Zeh, Charles Veitch, Carrol Gallant, Ann Ehrhardt, Norwood Maddry and Carrol Brooks represented St. Andrews) plans were made to sponsor a College Bowl between the member colleges. Also a plan was worked on which will make it possible for the colleges to get big name entertainers, by setting up a block of schools that could bring them in on a tour basis. A major issue also discussed at length was the problem of how to get day students more involved in campus activities.

I feel with this short introduction to NSSGA and some of its projects that it is easy to see why St. Andrews should belong to this organization. Being a new college St. Andrews can gain a great deal by discussing the problems we face with those student associations that have run across similar, if not the same problems, we are now confronted with. This is not, however, just a one-way street with St. Andrews on the receiving end. Being a new school also means new ideas and for any organization to continue to operate, it must have ideas for fuel.

The NSSGA has a bright future to look forward to. If it can keep one foot in the ideal world and the other firmly planted in organization and hard work there is no reason to think that NSSGA can not become the leading student organization in North Carolina.

Girls' Talk Of Boys' Fashions

In retaliation for the bombardment given our girls from a panel of fashion-conscious S. A. men, five young ladies met to discuss their likes and dislikes in men's fashions for Spring. Put on your armor boys!

Sophomore Marty Linville was the first to get on the soap box in a protest against the combinations of striped pants and madras shirts. Lane Gillespie, Freshman, contended that it also looks bad for fellows to wear different patterns of belts and shirts. Junior Inez (Buckwheat) Ewrig commented that matching madras belt, shirt, and wallet made sharp collegiate outfit.

Patsy Lackey, Senior, seemed to favor yellow for summer wear. She added that a little monogram on sweater or shirt made it more outstanding.

Judy Beecham, sophomore, contended that blue jeans looked just as tacky on boys as jean dresses did on girls. Continuing on the tacky line, Marty said the sunglasses chosen by a few S. A. boys were in poor taste. Some of the styles make the fellows look like roaches or water bugs walking around.

Lane stated that she was tired of the blue and white color scheme so fashionable last Spring. Judy commented that burgandy seemed the new color this year, especially in men's shirts and socks.

"I enjoy seeing college couples dressed in matching outfits," said Inez. For look-alike fashions, Patsy suggested that couples wear blazers with school monograms for an eye-catching twosome.

Females have a knack for saying what they think and Marty exemplified this trait when she said, "I wish some of our S. A. boys would relearn the use of a razor." Judy continued with the comment that no girl likes to date a Neanderthal man!

Sorry boys, but the panel was not very successful in choosing the most effective after shave lotion because Judy liked English Leather; Inez went for Old Spice; Canoe was Lane's favorite.

Professors' Hobbies Vary

In a recent survey of 39 of the faculty of St. Andrews, records show that the sports and hobbies of the professors vary from chess to an active interest in all sports.

Bridge was the most popular activity under hobbies, with gardening, music and reading being second. Twenty-two per cent of the teachers play bridge and fifteen per cent garden, have an interest in music and read.

Of the 13 women in the survey approximately thirty per cent listed cooking as a hobby. Four of the professors indicated an interest in flowers and arrangement; three women and one man.

Ten per cent of these faculty members travel. Some of the countries they have visited are the United States, Cuba, Canada and Europe. Miss Joyce Bryant has been in 40 of the United States.

Sewing was listed by four of the women and woodwork and shop by two men. There were three enthusiasts for art and three for photography. Of those interested in art there are two interested in painting and the other in art history. In another field of art, writing, there were two devotees.

Nature holds an attraction for twelve per cent. One of the divisions was family camping; another, hiking and a third, the study of birds, shells and animals. Under this category hunting was listed, too.

Several hobby topics which have only one enthusiast in the professors surveyed are chess, poultry breeding, plays and the theater, figure skating, radios and stamp and coin collections.

Dr. James Carver, head of the English department, breeds and exhibits pure bred poultry. Dr. Lindsey Hobbs enjoys cutting capers in figure skating. Radio work and collecting are the hobbies of Dr. Louis LaMotte.

In the sports field tennis heads the list with twenty-five per cent with football, baseball, swimming and golf following second at fifteen per cent.

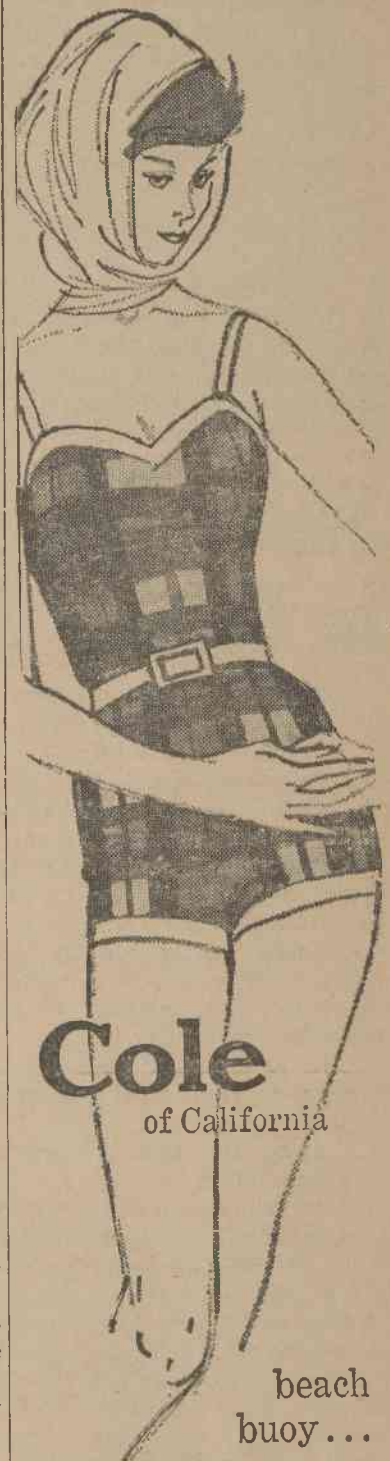

Two women and two men indicated an interest in fishing, one woman in boating, and one man in water skiing. Basketball, handball and volleyball were listed by four, three and one professors, respectively. Wrestling, boxing and track have one enthusiast and hockey two.

Music professor Miss Bryant is a devotee of archery and ping-pong. There was one other ping-pong fan, two dancers and one teacher interested in calisthenics.

There are 12 of these professors who have their doctorates and two who are working on theirs. One of these doctors is
