Three Plays On Tap For Weekend Here

Three plays are being presented today and Saturday at eight p.m. in the LA auditorium. The scenery, direction, and acting are done by the students exclusively. Prof. Arthur McDonald is sponsor for the plays.

The plays being presented are "The Sandbox" by Edward Albee; "The Boor" by Anton Chechov; and "It Should Happen To A Dog" by Wolf Mankowitz.

An example of the "theatre of the absurd" is Albee's "The Sandbox." Lillian Phillips is director, and scenery is by Sara Alex Bradbury.

"The Boor," a turn-of-the-century Russian farce, is directed by Libby Linville and designed by Sarah Yancey.

A comical version of the story of Jonah and the whale is "It Should Happen To A Dog," by the modern British playwright, Wolf Mankowitz. It is being directed by Bill Abrams and designed by Mardy Hardy.

All three productions are being presented by the Highland Players of St. Andrews' division of music, art and drama.

Costuming is being directed by Leighton Moffett. Martha Lassiter is properties chairman.

Hackney To Dallas For Talk

Rufus Hackney, athletic director at St. Andrews, is speaking today on "Organizing an Intramural Program" at the annual meeting of the National College Physical Education Association in Dallas, Texas.

Hackney is one of three college sports leaders from North Carolina on the four-day program. The others are Dr. Richard E. Jamerson of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Taylor Dodson of Wake Forest College.

Using colored slides and verbal presentation, Coach Hackney will discuss the total intramural sports program at St. Andrews. He will also deal with problems which colleges and universities face today, as well as future trends. A discussion period will follow.

Before coming to St. Andrews in 1961 to organize the physical education and athletic programs, Coach Hackney served for several years as assistant director of intramural activities at the University of North Carolina.

Free Movie

The Student Center Board is sponsoring a free movie Saturday, January 18, in the LA auditorium at 7:30. The movie, "Pickwick Papers," is being provided as a break in the final exam schedule.

From the novel by Charles Dickens, "Pickwick Papers" has a cast of outstanding British actors.

This is the last in the series that the Student Center Board has sponsored this semester.

Dr. Harold Taylor

SHEWMAKE HAS NEW EXHIBITION

A well-known Winston-Salem artist, Ed Shewmake, has a new series of paintings on exhibit at St. Andrews.

Business Students Attend Seminar

On January 8, a group of 50 Business Administration students attended a marketing finance seminar in Charlotte. The seminar was conducted by the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, with the program being presented by Joe M. Clark and Spencer M. Overton, vice presidents.

Mr. Clark delivered a morning lecture on "Financing Time Utility," and in the afternoon Mr. Overton spoke on "Financing Possession Utility." The itinerary also included a tour of the bank and a special luncheon for the students.

Arrangements for this unusual on-the-spot seminar were worked out by W.J. Jones, personnel manager of Wachovia, and Gentry W. Wade, associate professor of economics and business administration. Its purpose is to give practical application to classroom instruction in marketing and finance.

$400 Given For Spring Fling

At the Student Cabinet meeting on January 18, the motion was made to give the classes $400 for the Spring Fling. This money is to be divided proportionately among the classes.

The Cabinet will have a retreat on the weekend of February 8-9 in order to make nominations for the coming student body elections. Plans will be made for the initiation and installation of the newly elected officers.

The Cabinet hopes to initiate more interest in the Literary Magazine by suggesting that the Editorial board present this council in order that section leaders can present it at suite meetings. Also, at the next Student Body meeting, the co-editors, Margaret Abrams and Harriet Otten can present this project.

Dr. Taylor Talks On Problems Of Students

Noted author, educator, and lecturer, Dr. Harold Taylor spoke at St. Andrews Thursday evening in the fourth event of the concert-lecture series.

"The World of the American Student" was the topic of Dr. Taylor's talk. In it he touched on some of the problems and needs of American students.

"The American student," said Dr. Taylor, "is put into a white, middle-class, Protestant orbit.

Further, American students are learning for wrong purposes. High school is a means to college, college is a means to 'prestige living.'"

Dr. Taylor urged that educators should stop talking nonsense about the "average student" and consider the average student as one on his way to full development.

"The American student is caught in the situation whereas educational policy is viewed as national policy. Whatever the federal government decides it wants, the educational system is called upon to produce."

A director of the Peace Research Institute, Dr. Taylor has recently been host on an ABC network program "Meet the Professor." He has lectured at the major colleges and universities of this country and is the author of more than 200 articles as well as two books, "Education and Freedom" and "Art and the Intellect."

In 1945 he became the youngest president of an American college when he assumed the leadership of Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, New York. He earned his doctor of philosophy degree at the University of London at the age of twenty-three.

Must List

On Calendar

The official calendar of events and activities for second semester is now being prepared. All events which are planned or scheduled for second semester must appear on this calendar.

A "Request for Activity Scheduling" form, obtainable from the Office of Student Affairs, must be filled out and approved for each event or activity proposed or planned.

At present nearly 300 events are booked for the second semester. However, anyone who is planning a campus event should contact the Office of Student Affairs to see that the event is recorded on the official calendar.

Student organization heads should read "Procedures for Scheduling Activities" in the HANDBOOK.

Band Auditions

Students in the school districts from Concord to Bladenboro will participate in the auditions for the North Carolina All State Band on January 18. The auditions will be held in the Vardejl Building.

This is the second year the auditions have been held on the St. Andrews campus. The applicants chosen will be part of one of two bands, the symphonic band for students more advanced in musical training, or the concert band for the others selected for their abilities.

These students will return to the St. Andrews campus for a band clinic on February 7 and 8.

Questions, Please

On April 15-17 Dr. Carlyle Marney from the Myers Park Baptist Church of Charlotte and author of several books which include, "Beggars in Velvet" and "Structure of Prejudice" will speak on campus.

As an aid in preparing for his visit Dr. Marney has requested that students submit questions which they are concerned about. These questions may be left at the Lance office or with any member of the S.C.C. These questions will be forwarded to Dr. Marney who will answer them as well as use them for a guide for his talks and after activities in April.

NCEA Meets

The St. Andrews Chapter of the Student NCEA held its regular meeting on Tuesday, January 7, 1964. Dr. Joseph Wishon, Assistant Superintendent of Scotland County Schools, presented a program on future plans for the consolidation of the schools in the county.

The next meeting will be held February 4, and all members are urged to attend.

To Give "Jazz And Religion"

Loonis McGlohon and his nine piece orchestra will present a "Jazz and Religion" concert in the Liberal Arts Auditorium on February 2, 1964, at 3:00 p.m.

Mr. McGlohon, music director at WBTV in Charlotte, is a composer and arranger, as well as a jazz pianist. His presentation will be a short history of jazz, which follows the cycle beginning with the early Negro funeral music and ending with the rebirth of Negro church-inspired jazz of the present day.

The ninety minute program is sponsored by the Student Christian Council. Tickets are thirty-five cents and will be sold in the Student Center.

JOYCE MENGHI TO GIVE SENIOR RECITAL

Miss Joyce Menghi, pianist, will give her graduating recital Tuesday, January 14 at 8:00 in the Liberal Arts Auditorium. Miss Menghi's program will include: Partita No. 2 in C minor, Bach; Sonata in B-Flat Major, K. 570, Mozart; The Minstrels, Debussy; Rhapsodie Op. 79, No. 1, Brahms and Ruralla Hungarica, No. 5 Allegro Grazioso, and No. 7 Presto et Vivo. Miss Menghi is a student of Mr. Lewis Hoy. She plans to enter public school music following her graduation.
