

Yearbook Yearns To Improve, Make Mightier Memories

Students Evaluate Lamp and Shield

Student evaluations, yearbook conventions, and an ambitious, capable staff may be the foundations of a successful year for the 1967 "Lamp and Shield."

Mev Fraser, editor, reports that presently the annual staff is still involved in much organizational work. This work involves the coordination and orientation of a competent staff as well as the collection and organization of ideas for this year's annual.

Editorial Staff

The staff is being headed this year by an editorial committee. This group is responsible for all decisions that must be made. It is also responsible for bringing any student opinions to the attention of the staff.

The editorial committee consists of: Mev Fraser, editor-in-chief; Athos Rostan, business manager; Betty Baldwin, general edi-

In collecting and organizing ideas, the staff is being aided by student evaluation sheets and yearbook conventions.

Mev reports that students have been slow in returning evaluation sheets. "We appreciate the consideration of those who have responded, and we would encourage all others to please do so."

Class Portraits

The annual staff announces that class portrait pictures will be taken October 3-14. There will be a small sitting fee which will be announced later.

A sign-up chart will be posted September 26th. All students are urged to make appointments which they sign and to be prompt in keeping these appointments.

Dress for seniors will be dark coats and ties for men and a red, scoop-neck drape for women. The latter is the drape which received a substantial majority in the voting by senior women. The dress for underclassmen will be announced at a later date.

Mev stated, "We cannot please all the people all the time; however, it is our sincerest hope that all of our efforts for the improvement of communications and for an approach to a wider appeal will be successful and at least recognizable to the entire student body."

Play, Dean's Boat Race, and Pfeiffer Program for Oct. 8 Parents' Day

Because several hundred parents have already registered for Parents Day, October 8, our Associate Development Officer, Redgie Johnson, is beginning to worry about logistics problems.

"We would like to tell students, for example," said Johnson, that we've already sold all available tickets for Saturday night's performance of "The Boy Friend".

And Friday is mostly gone, too." "So please try to attend Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday."

Johnson is also planning a delectable luncheon for parents and their students on that Saturday," Johnson noted. "This means the traditional box lunches for other students, beginning at 11:30."

"Please help us keep the campus attractive by using the convenient trash cans for your lunch remainders."

The annual Dean's Cup Boat Races will be staged at noon, following a trio of panel discussions on the academic program.

After lunch from 1 to 2:15 p.m., parents will meet with advisers, and then the soccer game with Pfeiffer is on tap for afternoon entertainment.

Lietz Promotes Student Aids

"The student's increasing awareness of the library is as much apparent at St. Andrews as at U. N. C., perhaps more so," says new librarian, Dr. Richard J. Lietz.

Dr. Lietz who came to St. Andrews from the University of North Carolina said he also felt the introduction to the library exercise was far superior to other colleges.

Plans are being made to convert the conference room on the third floor into a study lounge which will house a projected paperback collection selected by the professors.

In order that uncatalogued books may be made accessible to students, a temporary author's card will be placed in the card catalogue, and the book may be called for at the circulation desk.

To further aid students a Zerox photo-copier will be installed. With the use of this machine students will be able to duplicate a page from a book or periodical for ten cents a copy.

Dr. Lietz feels that although a library is often used as a study hall, that the purpose of a good library is to promote studying by providing the necessary materials.

He believes with this in mind that "as time goes on, St. Andrews, like many other liberal arts colleges, will develop into a "library college."

Money Maker Again, Maurer

Excitement reigned as the prices soared. Freshmen, as well as juniors and seniors, had been saving for days to purchase their favorite sophomores to do 'nice' tasks.

Tasks could be anything from ironing and scrubbing floors to publicly washing clothes in front of the Student Center.

A slave, perched on top of a display platform, urged the enthusiastic crowd to bid higher. Opening bids were fifty cents. Slaves were bought at prices ranging from a dollar and five cents to twenty dollars.

Don Stokes, Junior, once again auctioned the sale, bringing in a record $145, $20 more than the efforts of the class of '68 last year.

This money goes to finance all the activities of serf week.
