A four course buffet dinner will open the festive evening. It will be followed by a floor show featuring a chorus line of campus beauties.

Women's Hours Up For Approval

By a near-unanimous vote of 23 to 2, the Senate Monday night passed a bill which would change closing hours from the present 11 p.m. to midnight for all women's residence halls at St. Andrews.

The bill, sponsored by the Welfare Committee, is now in the hands of Student Association President Bob Anderson. If he approves it the measure will eventually go to President of the College Ansley C. Moore for final approval.

The only negative discussion of the bill to come out while it was on the Senate floor Monday night was that it might cause problems with Saturday class attendance. John Apperson, who was the author of the bill, commented that perhaps the bill "would encourage more people to remain on the campus for the weekend because a mid-night curfew would enable couples to go to popular spots some distance from Laurinburg."

John further said that the bill was written in the interest of the current trend at St. Andrews toward "individual freedom" and the concurrent ability for students to make their own decisions concerning social and academic life.

will live up to their lively personalities in a self-written comedy act.

Miss Anderson expresses much interest in St. Andrews C & C program and in the way our college makes it possible for qualified physically handicapped student's to attend school. She comments that she likes St. Andrews and Laurinburg very much."

Women Players Play "House," Spanish Style

You think color T. V. is new and exciting? Wait until you see black and white theatre.

The Highland Players' next production, The House of Bernarda Alba, will be staged entirely in black white, and shades of gray. This stark color scheme will heighten and intensify the tragedy of Bernard's frustrated daughters, whose natural impulses are suppressed by their domineering mother.

The set, a realistic interior designed by Bob Bercaw, will be painted white and textured with gray to give the effect of stucco walls. A Spanish atmosphere will be created with archways and earthenware pottery.

The furniture will be constructed by the Players, except for the chairs, which are being ordered from Mexico.

The 19th century costumes, designed by John Pfaff and created by Julia Wilson, will be in black and gray. Different patterns and materials will add variety.

A guitar will set the mood and an off-stage chorus of men will magnify tension. Professor Thomas Sommerville is composing the music.

All this hard work and attention to detail should produce an exciting drama. The show will be presented November 16-19 at 8:00 p.m. in the L. A. A.

Spanish-speaking Marion Anderson

Halloween pranksters had their own ideas about the administration. Some twenty campus signs found new homes on the causewalk Tuesday morning along with massive "pop" art on the windows of the L. A. building.
