SA Is The Scene For Seventies Conference

Thirty National Merit Scholar semi-finalists will be on campus to attend the conference, "Challenge of the Seventies," Friday and Saturday. St. Andrews will sponsor the conference which will feature two nationally prominent educators from Washington, D. C.

Abram E. Manell is a career Foreign Service officer with wide experience in Europe and Asia. From 1960-65, he was Public Affairs adviser in the Bureau of Far Eastern affairs. More recently he has traveled throughout Africa and Latin America. Dr. Manell took his present assignment as Deputy Special Assistant to the Secretary for liaison with the governors in June, 1967.

Phillip H. DesMarais is a top man in the Department of Health Education, and Welfare. Before joining HEW, he taught for ten years at the College of St. Thomas and at Loyola University at New Orleans. Now Deputy Assistant Secretary for Special Services, he was for five years Deputy Assistant Secretary for Legislation. Presently he is deeply involved in future planning in higher education.

Dr. Malcolm Doubles, chairman of the "Challenge of the Seventies" Committee, reports that the semi-finalists will travel from Virginia, Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina to attend the conference.

Massie To Lecture Tomorrow In LAA

"Man, Molecules, and the Mind" will be the topic of Dr. Samuel P. Massie Jr. when he presents his public lecture Thursday night as Visiting Scientist at St. Andrews Presbyterian College. Dr. Massie, professor of chemistry at the U. S. Naval Academy, will speak in the liberal arts auditorium at 8 o'clock. There is no admission and the public is cordially invited.

Dr. Massie joined the faculty at Annapolis in 1966 after serving for three years as president of North Carolina College. He has been active in the work of the National Science Foundation, American Chemical Society, and other educational organizations.

While president of North Carolina College, he also was associate program director for the National Science Foundation and now serves as consultant. A former regional director for the National Institute of Science, Dr. Massie also was chairman of the American Chemical Society's Committee on Visiting Scientists.

Dr. Massie is the third of nine Visiting Scientists who will spend two weeks on the St. Andrews campus during the current academic year teaching classes and consulting with the science faculty. Dr. Massie, however, is dividing his two weeks, spending one week now and returning in the spring for a second week. The Visiting Scientist Program, now in its second year, is made possible by a grant from the Danforth Foundation.

2,294 Citizens Sign Petition

An unexpected 41% of registered Scotland county citizens signed a liquor petition on Tuesday. The petition called a general election in the county. The election will decide whether or not ABC stores and package beer will be legally sold in the county.

Those canvassing for signatures were at the eleven poll boxes in the county from the opening at 6:30 a.m. until 6:30 p.m. when the polls shut down. The greater majority of those passing the petitions were St.

Andrews students and faculty. During the 12 hour period, 2,294 names were placed on the petitions as 5,632 votes were cast for governor.

The most active polls were the National Guard Armory, the Court House, and the Community Building. One report came in from the Community Building saying that over 200 signatures had been obtained over a three hour period.

Co-ordinator of Tuesday's activities at the polls was St. Andrews philosophy professor Dick Prust. At a small celebration after the polls closed at the Ye Olde Worlde, Prust mentioned he was extremely pleased with the results and the support the movement had received so far.

The 41%, however, is not the total figure. Throughout the county, petitions are still circulating that will raise the figure to 50%, it is hoped. This is the percentage that the Scotland County Committee for Legal Control had hoped to obtain.
