

What Sort of Man Reads THE LANCE?

In every issue of a popular magazine there appears a picture of a well-dressed, attractive gentleman under which there is the caption, "What Sort of Man Reads PLAYBOY?" We are amused when we think of the sort of man The Lance would have to typify if such an advertisement were run with the caption, "What Sort of Man Reads The Lance?"

More than likely the picture would have to include the editor of the Lance and an occasional faculty face.

The question is pertinent, however. Who really does read The Lance? Maybe another question is appropriate here. Why should anyone bother to read The Lance?

With every issue of the St. Andrews "official student publication," there is a great abundance of newspapers blowing across the campus. These newspapers are usually free of attachment to any student's hand, floating freely about the bushes, trash cans and other likely place.

How many St. Andrews students actually consider their newspaper relevant to student life -- how many read the editorials or anything but the front page headlines and pictures?

We are not criticizing the student body for their apparent disregard for and disinterest in The Lance. The staff of this paper realizes the failure of the newspaper to interest the majority of the St. Andrews reading public.

Each Lance that is published will cover those issues of relevance to the campus, commenting upon those issues with opinions derived from the staff, and whenever differing views arise, these too, will be printed.

The Lance is not published to fill mail boxes on Thursday afternoons. It is printed to reflect the voice of the student body. Read it and respond -- there are issues of importance here in Laurinburg (believe it or not) and who knows, the kind of man who reads Playboy, may just as well read another media of relevance--The Lance!

Senate Is Apathetic

or unable to discuss the items and issues that came before them for consideration. The failing of responsibility of all but four or five senators to discuss issues during meetings seriously handicapped the Senate's ability to be a creative force.

Mr. Breckinridge said he felt frustrated by the apparent apathy of the Senate and felt if it did not cease, and if the Senate did not take upon themselves the responsibilities of their position, then he would be compelled to resign. Mr. Breckinridge stated he did not know precisely when or if he would turn in his resignation.

The meeting closed after Dick Prust suggested that each Senator, before introducing an item, should do adequate research.

ZPG Build Bird Houses

Zero Population Growth is starting a workshop this Saturday at 10 p.m. for the purpose of building Purple Martin Houses. It is the hope of ZPG that by building these bird house, Purple Martins, which feed on mosquitos, will be attracted to this campus and therefore keep the mosquito population under control. With the mosquito population being kept under control the need for the trucks that come around spraying insecticide during the spring and fall would be eliminated. Those interested are encouraged to contact Walter Thompson at ext. 257.
