PIRG Meeting Tonight

on this campus, with student Mac Johnson as initiator. Its purpose is to get the student body interested enough in PIRG to sign petitions to have the college approve the formation of a local PIRG board, which will choose representation to the state board, and to have the $1.50 for PIRG added to the general fee for students next fall. It is understood that those dissatisfied with PIRG may have their money refunded.

The book, "Action for a Change," is a manual detailing the organization and function of PIRG, from the local level on up. Copies are available from Mac Johnson at $1.00 each.

Students interested in PIRG are to meet with Mac at 7:00 p.m. in the College Union lounge tonight, Thursday, February 10th.

The College Union Board is sponsoring the move "Ice Station Zebra" this week-end. Showings are on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, February 11-13, at 8:00 p.m. in Avinger Auditorium. Admission is free.

Knights Journey To Norfolk Having Won Last Two Games

If you left the gym early Monday night because of the late start of the basketball game, the State-Carolina game, or to study, you probably wish you had stayed around. As SA was losing 32-39 at the half and was down 18 points with ten minutes left in the game, I will have to admit that St. Andrews did not look like it was going to win. So, how do you explain a 105-95 win? Well, it took two overtime periods, thirteen time outs, a technical foul on Captain Gary Linn, another on the ZOO SQUAD (for too much spirit), and some of the best basketball played at St. Andrews in a long time.

Two free throws by Gary Linn with one second left put us in a 76-76 tie. The game ball, if we gave it away, might go to Mark Harvey for four steals in those final ten minutes in the second half to ignite St. Andrews. It might go to Gary Linn for bombing in 27 points, or Robln Daniel for 16 rebounds, or Ray Andrews for 21 points and 13 rebounds. It could go to the whole team because we had 50 rebounds, 21 steals and we won 105-95. We controlled the boards and everyone had a good percentage from the floor and the free throw line.

So those of you that were around Monday night and were not here Winter Term wonder how we got a 4-17 record, it went this way:

UNC-Wilmington 90, St. Andrews 53

UNC-Greensboro 90, St. Andrews 78

N.C. Wesleyan 94, St. Andrews 74

Central Wesleyan 68, St. Andrews 55

Methodist 83, St. Andrews 56

Greensboro College 100, St. Andrews 64

King College 75, St. Andrews 56

Methodist 78, St. Andrews 60

Florida Presbyterian 81, St. Andrews 68

Pembroke State Uni. 81, St. Andrews 61

Lynchburg 84, St. Andrews 72

St. Andrews 64, Francis Marion 51

January was a bad month, as we won one and lost eleven. We played 12 games in 24 days, an average of one game every other day against a lot of strong teams. We were erratic, and our opponents were consistent.

It seems that with our win over Francis Marion and our come from behind effort over Greensboro Monday the St. Andrews basketball team has finally got it all together. As you read this the team is in Norfolk, Virginia, getting ready for a game with Virginia Wesleyan tonight. Tomorrow, they play N.C. Wesleyan in Rocky Mount, N.C., and Saturday they meet Lynchburg in Lynchburg. Three days, three conference games. Three days of travel in the "Blue Goose."

On February 17-19, the D.I.A.C. Tournament will be held at St. Andrews. The team will play to win--so support them. We could use a little help from our friends and the students.

elect to design a contract under the revised major requirements."

Under this new procedure the student, in consultation with a faculty advisor in the Politics department, will decide upon the courses which will comprise the major requirements. However, the student is still obligated to fulfill those requirements deemed necessary by the college for the fulfillment of the degree, such as Christianity & Culture.

An additional meeting of the EPC was scheduled for later this month.

Dorm Basketball

Basketball intramurals for women begin on Thursday, February 10. The participating teams are from Albemarle (A and B), Concord (A and B), Wilmington, and a combined team from Granville and Orange.
