Constitutional Protest On Date Of Elections

The challenge to the Elections Boards' procedures since the end of April is of little consequence in terms of seriously jeopardizing the elections slated for today or to the run-offs held Monday.

Ms. Jo Ann Foil, the newly elected Attorney General, stated she felt any positions vacant at the end of April could still be filled constitutionally even if the Student-Faculty Appellant Board up held Ms. Buck's challenge.

Ms. Foil based her opinion on Article III section 3(a) which provides for appointments to be made by the Student Association President with the consent of the Senate. The Article referred to by Ms. Foil states, "The President also... appoints such committees and fills such positions as are necessary for the operation of the Student Association with the consent of the Senate unless otherwise specified in the constitution..."

This means that should the Faculty Appellant Board rule all election procedures since the end of April invalid, the Student Association could appoint people to the positions they had been elected to and this year's Senate could confirm those appointments. The Student Faculty Appellant Board is scheduled to meet tonight at 7:00 to hear discussion and to hand down a ruling. Anyone may submit a verbal or a written statement to the Board for their consideration. For further information contact Molly McLeod.

Student Life Receives Publications Budgets

Life.

Roderick Brown, who had been informed of the meeting and that the Publications Board's Budget would be presented stated he did not realize that he was supposed to have attended the meeting.

In other action taken by the Student Life Committee a priority guideline was established for determining how groups of students requesting off-campus residency would be ranked in being granted off-campus living permission.

Dr. Decker is reference to a request for creative group living off-campus outlined the procedure that would be followed in establishing a priority rank for such projects. Each one would be assigned a number and arbitrarily chosen by drawing.

Such groups rank second in priority to married students, and those students living with parents. The last group to be considered are those students wishing to live off-campus for general, rather than specific reasons.

A petition calling for the provision of a gynecologist to provide internal examinations for women students and birth control met with opposition from Dr. Barnes, who questioned the necessity of a specialist in health facilities that can only handle emergency cases.

Glenda Buck raised the issue of recurrent vaginal diseases resulting from improper sanitation that could be easily and quickly cured with the proper facilities. This was approved by both Barnes and Dr. Decker, but the section dealing with birth control was not approved on moral grounds.

The issue was passed by a vote of 7 to 2 and will be sent to Dr. Hart for ratification.
