Rising Costs Of Paperbacks;

Non-credit Courses To Be Offered

A unique compliment of non-credit courses will be offered this spring under joint sponsorship of the St. Andrews Residential Life Office and the Richmond Technical Institute (RTI). All classes will be held in the evening on the residential side of Lake Moore with hall lounges, physical education building classrooms, the crafts center, and College Union Building serving as primary locations.

LOU was spawned by an interest programming questionnaire completed by SA students in the fall term. The survey jointly administered by the Student Activities Office, produced a variety of popular activity interest areas which are not common fare on the St. Andrews campus menu. In an effort to meet these expressed needs, LOU courses lasting from 6-60 hours, will be available on a non-credit, low or no tuition basis beginning the week of February 20.

Courses opening for registration will include:
Basic Auto Mechanics
Sewing Patchwork Quilts

Library Institutes New Policy

In an effort to reduce the number of overdue books and resultant fines, DeTamble Library is trying a new circulation policy on a trial basis. Library books can now be checked out for a period of four weeks with the due date always falling on a Thursday. The rationale behind this policy, The LANCE was told, is that students now need only remember to check for due books every Thursday. At the end of semesters, under this system as the previous one, books may be checked out for less than a month.

FLAUNTING VAST PRODUCTION NUMBERS with a cast of thousands, Busby Berkeley movies have finally made it to St. Andrews. The CUB Film Series is presenting "Goldiggers of 1935" this weekend.

"Goldiggers Of 1935" The CUB Movie This Week

To a great extent, the Warner Bros. world of the thirties was a real world, an urban proletarian Depression world, populated by tough, hard-working victims of circumstance scratching and scraping just to stay even. This tone even permeated the early Warners musicals.

Enter Busby Berkeley. This man wisely thought that the highest function a musical could serve was to cheer up its Depression audiences, not gloom them down to even deeper depths. And this Broadway routine was fine, except that if you wanted to see a Broadway show, you'd go to Broadway, not to the local Bijou. The movie medium had unique resources: why not us then to the hilt and give the people something they couldn't possibly get anywhere else.

For want of a better name, they called it a Broadway Show, but never did or could Broadway see anything like it. The curtain rises to an elaborate stage. The principals of the number typically Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler, begin to sing the theme song. Then the fantasy begins with a dissolve to a set containing what appears to be
