

Governors School

Two hundred rising high school seniors will arrive at St. Andrews Presbyterian College Sunday, July 2, to begin their six weeks of intensive study, says Dr. James Stephens, St. Andrews registrar and coordinator for Governor's School-East on the local campus.

Initiated by Gov. Jim Hunt, this second venture for the state will run until Aug. 12. Only one long weekend for the students to get away is planned in the schedule.

After meeting with Miss Cornelia Tongue, chief consultant for the gifted and talented program, State Department of Public Instruction, Raleigh, Dr. Stephens says the clerical staff will arrive June 1, along with a director, who is yet to be named.

Eighteen faculty members are expected in Laurinburg on June 26, coming from high schools across the state.

Students will be enrolled in two subjects each day, including art studio, theatre, choral music, two mathematics classes, two English classes, two natural science classes, social science and French.

Facilities will be set aside from them in Morgan-Jones Science Center, the Liberal Arts Building and the Vardell Building. While at St. Andrews, they will live in Concord and Wilmington residence halls, and will have full use of recreational and food service facilities. Their (continued on page 4.)

Library Theft

Detamble Library was entered after 11:30 on Monday night, April 24, and a small amount of cash and the Xerox machine auditor were stolen. Indications are that the library was entered by someone using a key and familiar with the location in which the cash reserve was kept.

Because of information received on Saturday, the library staff was aware that a theft might be attempted, and had taken steps to secure the cash, leaving only the receipts from the current book sale received on Monday.

Resignation Announced

Steve Newton, editor of THE LANCE announced publicly this week that he has already submitted his resignation as editor in early April, effective at the end of this semester. Newton gave 30 days notice to THE LANCE's advisor, Dr. William J. Loftus on April 11.

"It has absolutely nothing," Newton stated Wednesday, "to do with any present problems with the paper, and represents a personal decision taken some time ago."

Newton had no announcement of a successor, as has been the previous practice of resigning editors. "At the moment," he said, "I'm not certain how the next editor will be selected."

What Is Bacchanalia

BY TOM DUNN

The word Bacchanalia comes from the Latin Bacchus, the God of Wine. Bacchanalia is the celebration of that god. The first St. Andrews Bacchanalia occurred on a Friday afternoon in the spring of 1968, ten years ago this year. The location was the house of John Craig, past College Gulf on the way to Gibson.

The idea for Bacchanalia came from a bunch of students who enjoyed playing softball. They decided to play ball and drink beer at the same time. They had three or four kegs during the afternoon, and the whole campus was invited. Besides beer they had a greased pig chase. When caught, however, the pig was not roasted. Music was provided by John's stereo playing out the window of his house.

Kegs of beer was an essentially new idea at St. Andrews' parties. Rules on campus prohibited alcohol in all of the dorms. The duties of suite leader included informing the Residence Director when one of his suit mates was drinking. This was the first campus-wide beer party at St. Andrews. It paved the way for more off campus parties and broke the ground for eventual parties of this nature on campus.

From that first Bacchanalia, described by Dr. Dick Prust as the "major breakthrough in St. Andrews parties," Bacchanalia has grown in a decade to encompass a week-long variety of activities running the gamut from movies and games to the usual kegs and bands and the formal launching.

Elections At An End

Kunkle was chosen over Mike Manning by a 32-23 margin and Rick Blair defeated Joe Watson 28-17 in a race marked by 11 abstentions.

Norman Moseley came from a sizeable deficit to become President of Mecklenburg over Hal Bailey by an extremely narrow 35-34 edge.

Chris Hesley outpolled Mike Vaughn 19-9 to receive the Social chairmanship in Winston-Salem.
