Ramey lands grad scholarship

LAURINBURG—The National Collegiate Athletic Association announced today the presentation of a scholarship award to Robert McGarry (Garry) Ramey, a 1980 graduate of St. Andrews Presbyterian College in Laurinburg. The $2,000 scholarship is for postgraduate study at the university or professional school of his choice.

Ramey is the only triple-sport recipient nationwide: his award is in the areas of tennis, cross country, and track. He is one of six NCAA scholarship recipients nationwide in Division III. Nationwide, there were only two other awards presented in tennis, one other in cross country, and five others in track.

"Considering the number of potential candidates across the country, this award stands as a significant honor and achievement for the student and a tribute to the institution involved," said

Walter Byers, NCAA executive director.

Ramey fulfilled a business administration and psychology double major at St. Andrews. He graduated with high honors, accumulative average of over 3.75, and is listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

As a senior at the College, Ramey was elected most valuable player of both the varisty men's tennis and cross-country teams. He was voted to the All-Dixie Conference Team in cross-country, and was half of the number one men's doubles team in the Dixie Conference Tennis tournament.

In addition to sports participation at St. Andrews, Ramey also found time this spring to serve as a member of the central steering committee of the St. Andrews Self-Study, which put together a report enabling the College to be reaccredited with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. He also worked as a physical therapist at Scotland Memorial Hospital in Laurinburg while attending school his senior year.

Ramey's plans for next year may include graduate school in business administration at the University of Georgia. He has already been accepted there and will attend unless, he says "an even better offer comes about."

Coach goes to Denmark

LAURINBURG—Doug Riley, varisty basketball coach at St. Andrews Presbyterian College, has been selected by the Danish Basketball Federation as an instructor in two summer basketball camps in Denmark.

Riley, an assistant professor of physical education at St. Andrews, and coach of the men's tennis team in addition to basketball, was chosen as one of a select group of American coaches to participate in the program.

The Knight's fourth-year coach will be in residence at Aarhus, Denmark, outside of Copenhagen, from July 26 to August 10. During that time, he will serve as a basketball instructor to Danish youth in two one-week intensive sessions. Riley will also be leading two special clinics for coaches and he expects top international coaches to be participating. Riley's particular specialty during the two sessions will be individual and team defense.

While in Denmark, Riley hopes to investigate the possibility of locating European teams for competition against St. Andrews.

Coach Riley joined the St. Andrews faculty in 1977. A graduate of Morehead State University in Kentucky, he also earned a master's degree in physical education, guidance, and counseling from Miami University of Ohio.

He is a veteran of many basketball camps, those including Miami University camps in 1972, 1973, and 1976, and the Clemson Basketball Camp in 1975. He has published several articles on athletics in national journals, and is a member of the United Press International Coaches Voting Board.

Last year, Riley coached the Knights to a 15-8 record, St. Andrews' strongest season in years.
