

Theiron Talks Drugs

By SHARON STANLEY

Theiron Young,
Chief of Security:

"Our
concern is . . .

Late last year, the state of North Carolina enacted a drug paraphernalia law which defined the term "drug paraphernalia" and outlined penalties for the possession of such materials.

Specifically, the ruling stated that "It is unlawful for any person to use, or to possess with intent to use, drug paraphernalia to plant, propagate, cultivate, grow, harvest, manufacture, compound, convert, produce, process, prepare, test, analyze, pack, repack, store, contain, conceal, inject, ingest, inhale or otherwise introduce into the human body a controlled substance in violation of this law. Any person who violates this section is guilty of a crime and upon conviction may be imprisoned for not more than thirty days, fined not more than Two Hundred Ten Dollars, or both."

Last week, college Chief of Security Theiron Young sat in his Belk Center office and fingered the tube of a bong confiscated from a dormitory shower stall. As he held the bong painted with the message "SCHLNG" and decorated with silver tape, he discussed his attitude toward the law, and its effects on the St. Andrews campus.

Young labeled the rule as "a tool that's there, but not something you go out and raise Cain about." He said that currently the college "doesn't have a (uniform) policy," and stressed the future drug charges will continue to be handled on "case by case" basis.

He said that the law "hasn't been tried and a precedent isn't set. It will stand up in court. However, he said that the "NOT PLANNING AND DORM SEARCHES" is a sign of the law's strength.

Young emphasized that "our concern is not a person who smokes a joint, but the pushers." Will the new law aid in eliminating campus sellers? Young said, "I don't think it would help apprehending the pushing."

Candles Lit for W.B. Yeats

The Thursday, March 31 class meeting of Sister Bernetta Quinn's Dante class could be described as anything but ordinary. The class participated in a ceremonial lighting of candles for William Butler Yeats. Sister Bernetta also teaches St. Andrews' Yeats and Pound class and the ceremony marked the end of that class' study of Yeats.

The ceremony began with the reading of W.H. Auden's poem "In Memory of W.B. Yeats." It was read by Tom Lancaster and finishing he gave us a brief lecture on it.

You may ask yourself, "What do the Yeats and Pound class and the Dante class have in common?" One connection between the two was brought home by the presentation of Yeat's Noh Play Purgatory. In Dante's The Divine Comedy Purgatorio is the second of the three parts; a place of cleansing and purifying in order that the soul might go the next step - into Paradiso (Heaven), (the first is the Inferno, or hell). Yeat's play was brilliantly performed by Billy Murray and David Haskins, both members of the Yeats and Pound class.

Before the play began, each member of the class was given a candle. These lighted candles bathed the room with a soft, tranquil glow which provided light for the actors.

Following the play the candles were quenched and gathered together by Judy Diogo. The class was then treated to an enlightening five minute lecture by Beth Martinson entitled "Purgatory as Dante saw it." The ceremony ended as the class, in unison, sang "The Beatitudes" lead by Sister Bernetta and Sister Pauline.

New Lamp and Shield Editor Appointed

By SHARON STANLEY

At Extravaganza, she'll be there to make warm memories last forever. At Granville's ghoulish Halloween party, she'll capture the ghosts for print. At graduation, she'll capture the nostalgia and excitement of a senior class heading for diplomas led by strains of Scottish bagpipes.

In fact, as next year's newly appointed LAMP AND SHIELD editor, Rhonda Boyd will put to print remembrances from all of St. Andrews' social, academic, and personal events.

"A lot of people look at me like I'm crazy, but I enjoy working with the yearbook. It's a challenge, and I like taking that challenge" she says.

Rhonda is a veteran editor who directed publication of the 1980-81 annual. She accepted reappointment of the position on Wednesday, March 31 following an interview and recommendation by a Student Life Subcommittee, and unanimous acceptance by the SLC.

Rhonda cites several major changes she wishes to implement in next year's annual. "I'd like to see professional pictures of faculty and administration, more pages, and an even better quality publication than before" she says.

Also, Rhonda intends to include more scenic pictures of the campus in the publication, and desires, she says, to print "pictures more focused in on one person, rather than groups." She plans to work closely with Libby Turner, who she expects to "help a lot in getting more creative designs in layout."

To facilitate these improvements, Rhonda says she is "looking for lots of help next year. To print more pages, we'll need more staff."

Already, Rhonda has chosen Stephanie Fore to serve as Assistant Editor. Patrick Voswinkel will be Photo Editor, and Bob Rasmussen will act as Business Manager for the book.

Rhonda continues to search for a Clubs and Organizations Editor, Copy Editor, Faculty and Administration Editor, and Class Section Editor. She encourages current students to join the ranks of the LAMP AND SHIELD workers. "And I want more students than just incoming freshmen," she says.
