

Perkinson Responds to Claytor's Resignation

By TERRI DAVIS
 President Perkinson's response to Dean Claytor's resignation as Dean of Students was positive in that he respects Claytor's decision as to what is best for him personally. "I feel this is a good illustration of Bob's integrity and underlying self-confidence to make this tough decision," says Perkinson.

"There are certainly no hard feelings between us because Bob has made a good impact here. I understand that he now feels it is time to go onto a job which allows him to better use his counseling skills," says Perkinson.

President Perkinson is pleased with Claytor's accomplishment of, in essence, establishing the Student Life office at St. Andrews. "Bob healed the rift between students and the Student-Life office by creating one-to-one relationships with students instead of simply administrative-student relationships."

Perkinson also expressed his high regard for the position of Dean of Students. "I feel it is the toughest job on any college campus," he says, because the Dean of Students must relate to students in so many different ways.

"He has to be a friend to students as well as an adult role-model and also has to play the role of a disciplinarian," explains Perkinson. "He must constantly be aware of student's needs while also trying to establish good relations between other administrators, faculty, and the Board of Trustees. This is a very challenging and waring job."

"I have a tremendous regard for Bob Claytor as a human being," says Perkinson, "and feel he is a person of high integrity." "Again, he has had a good impact at St. Andrews, I respect his decision, and feel that another cycle of the college has simply been completed."

The party would begin with one keg and a pig roast on Friday night. More of the faculty participated in the earlier Extravaganzas. Now, as Neal Bushoven said, "they don't want to be thrown in the lake," so there is less faculty participation.

Until two years ago, Extravaganza was held on the weekend after spring break. Beer trucks were the sources of the beer, as of five years ago and local talent always performed the musical entertainment.

Four years ago the famous St. Andrews Halloween party was started as a fundraiser for Extravaganza.

There has always been a good turn-out for Extravaganza, "it's the most attended event on campus," said Bushoven. And importantly enough, it has never rained on an Extravaganza gala!

Now instead of one keg and one pig, there will be fifty kegs and seven pigs. Rather than forty to sixty participating students, there will be an expected five hundred to six hundred. Not only is there local talent, but professional bands; and there still are plenty of activities.

Extravaganza has been a long-celebrated event. As Neal Bushoven put it, "it has the longest continuity of any event on campus- it goes back to the dawn of St. Andrews."

Due To Lack of Funds

Extravaganza Costs Increase

Unfortunately, this year Extravaganza will cost SA students one dollar per person. Guests will be charged five dollars each. The student charge is due to lack of CUB funds and fewer alumni contributions.

Extravaganza weekend is planned for April 16-17 this year. The event will once again be held on Granville beach, an area that has been used at previous Extravaganza weekends, and is spacious enough to accommodate a large crowd. On Friday night the activities will begin with the talents of three campus bands providing a variety of music. Early Saturday morning the roasting of the pigs (7) will begin. This will once again be done professionally to avoid the problems of years past. Fifty kegs of beer are being supplied by Budweiser and soft drinks have been donated by the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Hamlet. SAGA will supply the side dishes and beverages to go with the Bar-B-Q for the picnic on Saturday.

The main events of the weekend will begin on the 17th starting at noon.

Throughout the day games and contests will be held, including a sack race, tug-of-war, raft race, etc. Late in the afternoon the musical entertainment sponsored by CUB will begin; three bands will successively play on into the night. These groups are, respectively, "Kier", "The Blazers", and "The Spongetones." With your interest and support, we are looking forward to a terrific Extravaganza 1982.
