Alcohol Controversy Crosses Country

With as much attention the new alcohol policy concerning student organization funds has created it is interesting to see that it seems to follow a trend that is spreading across the country. Not only are the smaller private schools cracking down on alcohol, but many big state universities are implementing the same regulation.

According to the new signs posted around the stadium, there won't be any more drinking at University of Alabama football games this year. Campus police and local law enforcement officials have geared up to watch fans for telltale signs of carrying booze to the game.

At Notre Dame, there's another tough new anti-drinking policy. Starting this fall, students can no longer bring alcohol onto university property.

Indiana University is going even further. University officials are making unannounced "spot checks" for alcohol at the public areas of campus dorms and fraternity houses to enforce a new no-booze-on-campus rule.

Colleges and universities around the country this fall are imposing tough new drinking policies, and are creating new means of making the policies stick.

Students who run afoul of the new rules typically face disciplinary actions escalating from reprimands to suspensions, with mandatory attendance at alcohol education classes. Some schools are tougher: Notre Dame's caught violating the school drinking policy are liable for a $100 minimum fine.

Not all students are happy about it. Indiana's student government is inviting student complaints against the "raids", worrying about students' privacy rights.

But the new wave of anti-drinking policies has yet to evoke much student response one way or the other.

The administrators' abrupt fervor follows drinking law changes in dozens of states over the last three years.

Dizzy Gillespie Comes Home

By BILL LIDE

Dizzy Gillespie, the world renowned jazz trumpeteer, returned home to his roots in Laurinburg to start the works for a proposed Jazz Hall of Fame that would be built in the Laurinburg area.

Gillespie, who is actually from nearby Cheraw, S.C., talked briefly to a large crowd on the Belk Center Patio about his proposed plans. He attended the Laurinburg Institute and feels that he should "give something back to the community" where he grew up.

Gillespie, along with the three other musicians that make up the quartet he is currently playing with, answered questions from curious students and members of the Laurinburg community.

The trumpeteer's plans on the proposed building include a possible tour of fund-raising concerts and a donation drive that would sell $5000 charter memberships to the Hall of Fame to businesses and other large corporations.

Gillespie is currently featured on Stevie Wonder's new hit "Do, I Do" and believes that "Stevie owes me one." He said that he has already received partial confirmation from Wonder and Chuck Mangione to play with him at the fund raising concerts.

Gillespie is currently on tour in the U.S. and is heading for Europe in the near future. On the subject of European jazz fans are much more aware of the jazz world than their American counterparts and he believes that Americans "Gotta be hip over here about our own music."

Gillespie also emphasized the importance of a community becoming aware of the music in their surroundings. Lastly he said that the people of Laurinburg owe it to themselves to bring the jazz center to their town and that they should be supportive of the Scotland County Center for Arts so that the dream can become a reality.

Get The Picture

By NANCY HOGG

Do you want to be in the flash...be really where it is at? Well, be at Belk's patio on Tuesday, October 26th at 11:20. As part of Hat Day the Art Guild is sponsoring THE BIG picture. What is THE BIG picture? Well, it is going to be a photographic phenomenon. The picture will consist of each person in the entire St. Andrews community; students, dogs, maintenance, faculty, administration, cats, horses, and anything else that qualifies as a participant in our environment.

Tradition has always been an aspect that has kept a community together. That is the mere fact of why we are bringing back THE BIG picture to St. Andrews. The last school picture that was taken in 1975. Therefore, since this is such a unique and diverse group, we knew this would be the best group to reinstate this idea.

The St. Andrews community consists of a variety of people that are doing alot of different things. We would like to get together and see who everybody is. What do you think?... "There are alot of ugly people I would like to have a picture of," said James Linehan. "Better than a poke in the eye with a sharp stick," said Cleve Zahner. "Everybody should show up, it sounds like a lot of fun said Betsy Brown. "Great idea, can I bring my basketball," asked J.R. Sutton. "Only if I can stand in the front," said Natalie Christophe. "I would have to be in the middle," said Buck. "That's nice, will it fit," said Amelia Suryaatmadja. So, get in the picture on Tuesday, and hats off to you if you are there.
