

St. Andrews Hosts Riding Championships

LAURINBURG, N. C. — St. Andrews Presbyterian College will host the 1985 Affiliated National Riding Commission (ANRC) Intercollegiate Riding Championships April 19-21. The ANRC is an affiliate of the American Horse Show Association.

The site of the '85 championships will be Little River Farm in Pinehurst, North Carolina, in the heart of the Carolina horse country. St. Andrews, this year's host team, finished sixth overall in 1984 in their first championship competition.

The field for this year's championships will consist of 14 of the nation's top college riding programs. Intercollegiate teams from the University of Virginia (1984 champions,) the University of Florida, the University of Georgia, the University of South Carolina, Oregon State University, The University of Oregon, the United States Military Academy (West Point), Davidson College (NC), Virginia Polytechnical Institute, Midway College (Ky), Sweetbriar College (VA),

Goucher College (Md.) and the College of William and Mary (VA.)

Teams will consist of no more than three riders and horses with the best two scores counting toward team score. Other riders may compete as individuals. The championship will go to the college receiving the highest cumulative score for the three riding phases. Individual championships will also be awarded.

The three phases of riding competition will consist of a hunt seat equitation program ride, modified cross country and a hunt seat equitation stadium course. The program ride will test the riders over a prescribed equitation pattern which includes American Horse Show Association (AHSA) equitation tests 1-16. The cross country phase tests the competitor's equitation ability over a hunter's trials course in open country. The hunt seat equitation will be judged similarly to United States Equitation Team Medal competitions.

This year, for the first time, an optional fourth phase consisting of a written theory examination will be offered. The examination will address riding theory examination will be offered. The examination will address riding theory and horse science questions. Championship recognition will be awarded for the written phase of the competition.

Judges for the 1985 Championships will be Edna Lytle of Dickerson, Md., from the American Horse Show Association and Marion Lee of Arlington, Va., an ANRC National Judge.

Elizabeth Clement of Toano, Va., will serve as Steward for the Championships for the third consecutive year. Championship Secretary will be Beth Dowd of Pinehurst, N. C. and Donna Evans of Southern Pines, N. C., will be Chief Scorer.

Shelby French, Director of Riding at St. Andrews is the Coordinator for the 1985 ANRC Intercollegiate Championships.

With a championship in the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association Region 9 Stock Seat competition already under their collective belt, the equestrian team will strive for even more championship opportunities in this league as the season winds to a close. St. Andrews sends its team to national competition in Lexington, Kentucky on May 5 and 6, where eleven other regional champions will be waiting to compete.

Danny Robinson will defend at the nations his 1984 Stock Seat Equitation Rider Championship, while Coleen Kelly will challenge him. An optimistic note for the future is that Coleen is the only junior and there are no seniors on the squad. Fourteen first-year students and three sophomores complete the roster.
