

Painting Schedule for "The Wall" Released

Dean Williams Loftus has released a permanent schedule for the painting of graffiti wall in the hope that there will be no accusations that the wall was painted at a particular time in order to wipe out a protest message. Student government officials asked that the wall be repainted on a regular three-week basis, hoping to deter student painters from defacing sidewalks and buildings. The schedule is as follows:

27 October	2 March
17 November	23 March
8 December	20 April
19 January	11 May
9 February

Reptilian Rebellion

by J.F. Bradsher

Another peaceful day arises over St. Andrews and everything seems fine. During lunch, I see people throwing their cafeteria food to the hungry turtles that dwell in the lake that surrounds the campus. Everyone seems happy and no one is having a second thought about exposing the turtles to the atrocious cafeteria food. They leave to go to this afternoon classes. I see at dinner the same thing is being done to the turtles.

That night it is quiet; the kind of night when the only things you can see are the lustful stars and the full moon. The campus inhabitants settle for a normal night's sleep. What happens next will shock and terrify every innocent soul that lies at rest.

Out in the lake the turtles stare around after feeling the full impact of the poison they hve received in the form of food. The turtles begin to emerge from the water. Their eyes glow in the moonlight. They have been tortured for the last time. Tonight they get even with the unsuspecting campus dwellers. Hundreds of turtles squawk on the cement path adjacent to the campus cafeteria. Each having one thought in mind: getting even with the land creatures. There seems to be a consensus to their attack procedure, because they split up to form numerous armies of equal proportion and deadly intentions.

First, they go looking for revenge at the Belk Center. No one is around, but the turtles leave the center is chaos. The noise that the turtles make does not alarm security guards who patrol the campus.

The turtles advance further through the campus. The dorms are little to no hinderance for their attack. They quickly and quietly break the stronghold which we call a lounge area. The first sight of the rampaging turtles is seen by the Orange dorm occupants. Screams shatter the sound barrier as the turtles take prey on their victims. Some victims make the mistake of enraging the turtles by hitting their invulnerable shells. This makes the turtle's revenge even sweeter, as they tear into the flesh and blood of their frantic victims. The screams alert the other dorms, but the turtles are abundant. No one can escape their wrath. The next day the sun shines brightly over the campus of bones, while the buzzards fly swiftly to gorge on the leftovers from the preceding night.

Members of Young Republicans talk with Hamby at a local gathering.

Congressman From Meck Dorm?

by Nathan West

This past Saturday, at the Republican Headquarters in Laurinburg, a rally was held in support for Billy Hamby's bid for United States Congress. A large number of St. Andrews students turned out for the event.

by Billy Ocean, Gonna Fly Now from "Rocky," Back To The Future and more. Many more good ones are to come.

Mr. Jim Moss and the members of the Pep Band would like to encourage everyone who has the time for Pep Band, 1 hour per week, and Community Band/Wind Ensemble, 2 hours per week, to get involved. It is a great experience.

Hamby spoke on his platform and also his ties with St. Andrews. Many were surprised to hear how close his ties were. Hamby served as the Resident Director of Mecklenburg Dorm during 1980-81. Along with his ties to the college, Hamby was a school teacher in Laurinburg. Hamby expressed his concern about the educational system in North Carolina, and as one of his main priorities he plans to raise the literacy rate.

Members of the Young Republicans Club will be busy in the coming days as they make a final telephone campaign to area residents.

Remember to vote on November 4th!

College And Community Unite Through Music

By Julie Norem

The Wind Ensemble has merged with the Laurinburg Community Band, and may be called The Laurinburg-St. Andrews Community Band.

Mr. Moss, director of the Wind Ensemble and Pep Band, joined the St. Andrews faculty in February of this year. He is slowly building the program up from a nonexistent one just a year ago.

Mr. Moss directed the Wind Ensemble during the Spring Term of 1986. There were 24 players with an even instrumentation. This year there are 29 players, but with a predominance of woodwinds.

The Laurinburg Community Band was reformed this past summer under the direction of Mr. Bert Owen. Mr. Owen is the band director at Scotland High and coordinator of Bands in Scotland County, and has been in Laurinburg since 1975. The Community Band dates back to 1914 when all communities had a town band. Since then the Laurinburg Community Band has been in existence off and on.

The Laurinburg Community Band consists of adults from the community who wish to play. At the end of the summer, the local college students had to return to school. This caused a similar problem except that it was a predominance of brass.

At the end of September, Mr. Moss and Mr. Owen got together, and with the consent of the Wind Ensemble members, decided to merge the two bands. The outcome is a large band which is perfectly balanced.

On Saturday, October 18, the Community Band-Wind Ensemble performed at the John Blue Festival, and on Sunday, October 19, they performed at Westminster Nursing Home.

Together there are 52 members, half of them St. Andrews students. Mr. Moss and Mr. Owen will split the directing equally. When Mr. Moss is directing, Mr. Owen will play the clarinet, and when Mr. Owen is directing, Mr. Moss will play the tuba.

Rehearsals are alternate Monday and Tuesday nights from 7-9 p.m. at Scotland High School. The next concert is tentatively set for Tuesday night, December 2 at Scotland High School Auditorium. Mr. Owen hopes that "at some point in the future, performances will be held on the St. Andrews Campus." The reason why rehearsals are not held on the St. Andrews campus is because the college does not have sufficient percussion equipment.

St. Andrews student Shannon Standbridge thinks that the best thing about the merged bands is "being able to hear all the instruments together." Mrs. Betty Owen, clarinetist and wife of Mr. Bert Owen says she is in it because she loves to play.

If anyone is interested in joining the music program here at St. Andrews, contact Mr. Jim Moss ext. 234.
